Food Doled, Refugees Add To Madrid's War Anxiety

Families' Influx Raises Population of City by 50 Per Cent.

Starvation Is Faced Unless Aid Arrives

New Second Line Army of 35,000 Mobilized by Loyalists.

The Situation Abroad.

Verifying reports Madrid was faced with starvation unless supplies arrived soon, Spanish government officials rationed food for the refugee-swelled population of 1,500,000 as rebel forces drove close to the capital's outskirts.

In a bitter session in London, the Spanish non-intervention committee rejected Spain's and Russia's charge that Italy and Portugal aided the Spanish rebels.

Spanish charges that Italian armed forces have installed themselves in the island of Mallorca and are preparing to launch an expedition against Catalonia were reported to have been corroborated by a secret report of the British Intelligence Service.

Food Is Rationed.

By the Associated Press.

On Madrid Battlefronts, Oct. 28.—Wearied defenders of besieged Madrid tonight rationed food for the refugee-swelled population of 1,500,000 and mobilized 35,000 additional civilians for the front lines.

In addition to the Fascist insurgent armies tonight within 10 miles of the capital, another army of bedraggled refugees from other areas increased the gravity of the Madrid situation.

Verifying reports Madrid was faced with starvation unless supplies arrived soon, the civil governor, Carlos Rubiera, organized a provisioning committee to dole out dwindling food stores.

The normal 1,000,000 population of Spain's capital city, authorities estimated, had been increased 50 per cent by streams of haggard old men, women and children which have trudged into the city from rebel-captured areas.

Most of them possessed nothing but carts of household belongings—no food, money or clothing.

The government tonight saw sheer force of numbers as the best—and perhaps only—method of stopping insurgents.

The military high command mobilized all able-bodied men between 20 and 45 into a new second line army estimated at 35,000.

Rebel leaders tonight smiled with utmost confidence at reports of Madrid's physical and human defenses so hastily organized against them.

The advance units of their V-shaped attack were each within 10 miles of Madrid and having little difficulty advancing.

For the final assault on the city itself, the rebels were saving a deadly fleet of 200 "baby" armored cars and tanks.

It was not their wish, the rebel leaders asserted, to spill more blood in Madrid than necessary.

The populace, they hoped, would be terrified into surrender by their daily airplane strafing, and if not by this the capital's defenders might be demoralized when the insurgent artillery was brought into play.

Rescuers Fight To Reach Hunter Trapped on Ledge

By the Associated Press.

Salt Lake City, Oct. 28.—Rescuers fought chill blasts and jagged rocks tonight in an effort to reach a 21-year-old injured hunter trapped on a ledge in the rugged Wasatch Mountains southeast of here.

Lloyd Rawson fell over the brow of a cliff in the precipitous mountain fastness shortly before noon as he scoured the desolate region for big game.

Only a protruding ledge a short distance below saved him from plunging on another 300 feet to certain death.

His leg broken and suffering from painful body bruises, Rawson lay on his precarious perch for three hours before a signal fire and his whistling brought his 17-year-old brother, Joseph, from whom he had separated shortly before the accident.

After finding his brother alive, Joseph descended the cliff and raced 5 miles to the nearby community of Granite for aid.

Loyalists Assert Italy Arms Isle To Invade Spain

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Paris, Oct. 28.—Sensational allegations in a communique issued here yesterday by the Spanish Embassy that Italian armed forces have installed themselves in the Island of Mallorca and are preparing to launch an expedition against Catalonia in a few days, have been corroborated by a secret report of the British Intelligence Service, it was learned tonight.

The Spanish communique said there was every reason to believe that the Italians who were called into Mallorca to aid the Spanish rebels had quietly shoved their allies aside and now are planning to make an attack on their own against the Catalan coast around the first of November. The communique then made the following definite and precise allegations:

Antiaircraft Batteries.

The Italians are feverishly fortifying the coast of the Balearic Islands, having lately received reinforcements from an Italian ship, which debarked at Palma eight complete antiaircraft batteries.

Eight submarines painted in gold and red, the colors of Gen. Francisco Franco, leader of the Spanish rebels, are ready to leave the base at Genoa with a complement of Spanish rebels and officered by Italian naval officers. The mission of these submarines is to prevent any foreign ships from approaching the Balearics and at the same time to prevent vessels considered as undesirable — in other words, Russian vessels—from entering the port of Barcelona.

The facts concerning the alleged Italian military occupation of Mallorca may have been more or less inaccurately reported by both the British and Spanish observers, but

Dream Comes True, So 10 Girls Split $150,000 in Sweeps Fund

Laundresses in Edgewater, N. J., Stake 25 Cents Each for Ticket on Basis of 'Premonition;' 4 Washingtonians Shut Out of Big Money.

New York, Oct. 28.—Ten girl laundry workers who staked a quarter each that Teckler Mandell's dream couldn't be wrong cashed in on their faith yesterday to the tune of $150,000 as Dan Bulger won the Cambridgeshire Handicap at Newmarket, England, and converted their pasteboard Irish Sweepstakes ticket into gold.

Toilers in an Edgewater, N. J., dry cleaning plant, the ten held one of the nine tickets which Americans drew on the Cambridgeshire favorite. Consequently each of the "Ten Girls," as they were identified in the Dublin drawing, will reap $15,000, less taxes.

Miss Mandell led the laundry celebration by acclamation. For it was she who authored the two-bit fortune, who dreamed the dream that has brought her and her nine cronies more money than they would earn in years of pants pressing.

Dreams of Victory.

She dreamed—this was many months ago—that she was destined to buy a winning sweepstakes ticket. But she didn't have the necessary $2.50. So she talked nine of her shop friends into going in for a quarter apiece.

And they drew the favorite, Dan Bulger.

128,429,000 Is Estimated for U. S.; 5,654,000 Gain in 6 Years.

The same estimate gave the population of the United States as 128,429,000. The figures are the estimated populations on July 1, 1936.

The District of Columbia population showed an increase of 132,131 during the last six years. The 1930 census gave the population as 486,869. Most of the increase has taken place since 1933, the beginning of the New Deal.

The figures indicated that there are 12 states with fewer people than live in Washington.

Shipping Strike Nears Deadline On West Coast

Paralysis Creeps Slowly Over Waterfronts as Parleys Continue.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Oct. 28.—A shipping paralysis crept slowly over West Coast water fronts tonight with the approach of midnight—zero hour for a long-threatened maritime strike.

Employers met with representatives of two unions in a "final" but fruitless effort to get together on pending peace proposals and police in some cities took preliminary steps to preserve order in the event of a walkout which might involve 37,000 workers.

Union leaders privately expressed a belief that only the intervention of President Roosevelt could avert the strike, destined to start at mid-

Boy, 9, Is Rescued After 5 Days of Wandering, Hungry and Cold, in Wild Montana Mountains

By the Associated Press.

Missoula, Mont., Oct. 28.—Pitch-stained, hungry and tired, 9-year-old Murray Walkup Miller snuggled between warm hospital blankets tonight, rescued after five days of wandering in western Montana's rugged Sapphire Mountains.

The youngster was found today by H. J. Daigle and Charles Lear, Forest Service employes. He was brought to a hospital here, suffering from exposure to sub-freezing temperatures and hunger. Physicians indicated his condition was not serious.

Daigle said the boy was so weak he could scarcely talk when the foresters came upon lying beside a creek not far from the Bitter Root lookout cabin.

"I couldn't wade the creek," the boy said. "It was too deep, and I was awfully tired."

Murray, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Miller, of Stevensville, Mont., had wandered 15 miles from where he left his step-father Saturday. The mountain range in which he was lost is considered "the roughest in this part of the West."

"It was only an accident that we found the child," said Daigle. "I was going up Rock Creek with Charles Lear when we noticed a boy across the creek. Lear waded the stream and brought him back. I recognized him immediately."

The lad said he became lost, when he went for water at a creek near where his stepfather was cutting wood.

"When I started back I couldn't tell where I was and just kept going," he said.

"I started to look for them (his step-father and half brother) and I hollered, but nobody answered at all. My dog was with me then, and I tried to find where they were working. Pretty soon my dog started to chase some mountain goats and he left me."

He stopped his story to ask if the dog had been found, and smiled as friends told him the animal was safe.

"I thought he was lost too," he said.

Murray said he heard nothing of the nearly 1,000 volunteers who combed the hills searching for him.

He was unaware of the number of days he had been gone.

"I got pretty tired," he said weakly. "I knew I was lost. This morning I fell down and hurt my hand, when I tried to get across the creek (Rock Creek)."

The boy did not say what he had eaten while lost.

Earlier today, Sheriff James Oliva, of Stevensville said the search for the boy had been called off, and Montana, Idaho and Washington officers had been asked to watch for him on the theory he was hitch-hiking to an aunt's home at Grand Coulee, near Spokane.

Security Act 'Wage Fraud' Study Asked

Board Says Use of Name on 'Data' in 6 States Is Misleading.

Green Hails Legislation; Means Slash in Pay, Hamilton Holds.

By Felix Bruner.

The Social Security Board last night asked the Department of Justice to investigate the source of posters, tacked up in places of employment in at least six States, indicating the board had ordered wage reductions in connection with the social security act, which becomes effective January 1.

The action climaxed a bitter controversy over charges employers have been misrepresenting the law and counter-charges that the law is a "fraud on the workers."

Shortly after this action was taken word was received here of the arrest of a Des Moines, Iowa, manufacturer, charged with inserting in pay envelopes of his workers unsigned notices "tending to create sentiment against President Roosevelt" by criticizing the social security act.

Developments included:

A radio speech by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, calling the law "a form of legislation for which workers have prayed and petitioned for many years."

Assailed by Landon.

Gov. Alf M. Landon, in a speech at Newark, N. J., declared the social security law "will create social insecurity."

John Hamilton, Republican national chairman, challenged President Roosevelt to defend the act and declared it means "wages are reduced 3 per cent."

In New York—Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., Eastern division manager of the Republican campaign, said that the notices put into pay envelopes concerning the social security measure "have had a great deal of effect among the workers."

"There has been a wide, drastic change of sentiment among the workers," Martin said, "and all over the country Gov. Landon is receiving the benefit of a remarkable last-week trend."

Assailed by Thomas.

In Rochester, N. Y.—Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, called the social security act "exceedingly unsatisfactory." According to the Associated Press, he attacked the law on three fronts:

"Failure to provide any arrangement for health insurance; inadequate grants for immediate old-age assistance through a plan that places the burden on younger workers, and grossly unsatisfactory arrangements for unemployment insurance."

He said the law does not provide for persons now unemployed and that to get insurance "the worker must first get a job and then lose a job."

The posters, on which the Social Security Board charged its name was used fraudulently, are being displayed in California, Illinois, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Virginia and other sections of the country, the board said. They are so printed as to appear to be signed with the name of the board.

The posters read:

"Notice!

"Deductions from pay start Jan. 1.

"Beginning January 1, 1937, your employer will be compelled by law to deduct a certain amount from your wages every pay day. This is in compliance with the terms of the social security act signed by President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, August 14, 1935.

"The deduction begins with 1 per cent, and increases until it reaches 3 per cent.

"To the amount taken from your wages, your employer is required to pay, in addition, either an equal or double amount. The combined

Mollison Refuels In Newfoundland On Atlantic Flight

By the United Press.

Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, Oct. 28.—James Mollison, flying in a dinner jacket, landed his green monoplane here at 3:25 p. m. today and immediately began refueling for a flight across the north Atlantic to London tomorrow morning.

He left Floyd Bennett Airport, outside New York City, at 8:44 a. m. today on the first part of a flight that will carry him to South Africa.

Mollison's fast ship took him up the eastern coast of North America without trouble, but he made the scheduled stop here because he needed fuel. His plane, Dorothy—named for Dorothy Ward, an actress friend of his—can cruise at 250 miles an hour. He had 420 gallons of gasoline when he left New York and planned to get 600 gallons here.

Mollison, whose marriage to Amy Johnson, British flier, is about to be broken by a separation, said he hoped to make London in 17 hours flying time from New York. That would be a record.

Just before he left New York, Mollison excitedly waved a piece of yellow paper and said:

Statue of Liberty Is Rededicated to Peace and Freedom.

Text of the President's address—Page 7.

By Sidney Olson.

A Staff Correspondent.

New York, Oct. 28.—After an uproarious ovation that greeted him throughout three New York boroughs today, President Roosevelt stopped at his East Sixty-fifth street house here tonight for a brief rest before again boarding his campaign train for tomorrow's dash through Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware.

In the hectic day's campaigning, in which the President rededicated the Statue of Liberty to international freedom and peace, reaffirmed his pledge of a "sound housing policy" and commented on the "evidences of prosperity everywhere," the path of the President veered continually nearer that of his opponent, Gov. Alf M. Landon, until finally they crossed routes at Grand Central Station.

As horsemen bearing bright red torches preceded Gov. Landon, marching east on Forty-second street, the President's long entourage turned from Park avenue into the ramp around Grand Central Station, passing swiftly far over the head of the Kansas Governor on his way to a nearby hotel.

During the day's itinerary, the President spoke three times. Detraining at Bayonne, N. J., he made a routine prosperity speech to several thousand voters assembled by the railroad tracks under the direction of Frank ("Boss") Hague, the mayor of Jersey City.

Then began the motor caravan trip, in which the President motored through 35 miles of cheering crowds, and took two ferryboat rides before returning to his city home in East Sixty-fifth street to dine.

Dressed in a gray tail coat and heavy oxford gray ulster, the President waved his hand or his 10-gallon campaign sombrero at solid lines of cheering citizenry most of the day. The weather was chilly, despite the bright sunshine.

Cheered by Children.

Most of the morning spectators were school children, thousands of them lining the curbs two-deep for miles to scream their glee in two-fold happiness at seeing the President of the United States and in getting out of classes. All were well equipped with American flags, and in many sections, particularly in Brooklyn, scores were costumed for the occasion, with Uncle Sam suits predominating.

In Bayonne the President had referred to "the greater prosperity," and "the greater happiness everywhere self-evident." The bright, new-washed faces of the school children, their general well-dressed appearance, even in the poor sections, and the mile after mile of new topcoats on the men and new fall outfits on women testified to the accuracy of his observation.

At Staten Island the Presidential party was driven aboard ferryboats which cut across New York Harbor to Bayridge, in Brooklyn, where the school children again had been turned out for miles along the route.

Reaching Brooklyn College, the President helped lay a cornerstone for the building supplanting the log barracks in which 14,000 students are now housed, according to Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York, who presided at the ceremonies.

The President didn't actually do any trowel work, but contented himself with a verbal dedication of the college to the better things of life.

Back in the cars, the party continued through more adult crowds

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE.

White Admits Backing Norris In Senate Race

Political developments that added to the unusual lineups marking the current campaign yesterday found William Allen White, close friend of Gov. Alf M. Landon, supporting the candidacy of George W. Norris, veteran Nebraska Senator, seeking re-election as an independent, while Norris was attacking Gov. Landon.

At the same time, White, noted Emporia, Kans., editor, said it was "unfair to Alf Landon and unfair to me" to classify White as "one of the chief advisers" of Gov. Landon. White made the statement in Boston, the Associated Press reported, in reply to announcement by C. A. Sorenson, former attorney general of Nebraska, that White had indorsed Senator Norris. Sorenson termed White one of the Landon advisers. The Emporia editor confirmed the statement that he had indorsed Norris in an editorial in his paper some weeks ago, but added:

"I have seen Alf Landon but three times since last June. I am not one of his advisers. I am not on his board of strategy and have never been on his train."

In an interview at Boston, however, he took occasion to call "a pure fake" what he said was a campaign by the Democratic National Committee to "smear Landon" through an attack on the Kansas common school system.

He said the only basis for the charges was the fact that Kansas has some vacant school buildings which represent school consolidations, due, he declared, to good roads which permit transportation of children to larger and better equipped buildings, and to the fact that many families have moved out of the "dust bowl," leaving school districts with only one or two pupils.

"Kansas spends on her common schools more per pupil than the average prairie State, and has more high school and college students than a vast majority of the American States," he contended.

Meanwhile, Judson King, research director of the Progressive National Committee, was making public here a message from Senator Norris attacking Gov. Landon for his "silence" on rural electrification.

The message said:

"The refusal of Gov. Landon to tell the Nation what he will do with the TVA and his silence on rural electrification, coupled with the fact that he is solidly backed by the utility combine, is proof enough that if elected he would not carry out the farm electrification program effectively and would not support co-operatives and the power magnates would have their way."

Bids for Labor Vote In Newark Speech

Text of Gov. Landon's address—Page 9.

By Robert C. Albright,

A Staff Correspondent.

New York, Oct. 28.—Welcomed to Manhattan by one of the greatest demonstrations of the present campaign, following a careful Newark bid for labor votes, Gov. Alf M. Landon tonight capped off his most active day in the East by cementing his new-found friendship with Alfred E. Smith, former nominee and leader of the Democratic Party.

Landon made his strongest labor appeal in Newark at noon, promising full protection of the workingman's rights and lamenting labor "insecurity" under the social security act. Then he moved into the heart of New York, unwittingly a principal in a strange duel of campaign personalities, as paths of the two Presidential candidates crossed in this city.

But the high light of a dramatic eight hours was staged in the Governor's own hotel rooms here tonight, when Smith clasped hands with the Republican candidate and the two exchanged assurances of the highest esteem. Former Gov. Smith had completed his "walk."

Tonight a plan was under discussion for Smith to introduce Gov. Landon at the latter's Madison Square Garden speech tomorrow night. Decision was left up to Republican Chairman John Hamilton, who arrives tomorrow.

Roosevelt Ahead.

President Roosevelt's motorcade whizzed past New York headquarters of Gov. Landon only a few minutes before the Republican nominee arrived there. Moving through a mammoth welcoming demonstration, Landon took rooms in the old-fashioned Murray Hill Hotel to prepare for tomorrow's climactic speech of his Eastern tour just five minutes before Roosevelt sped over the Park avenue ramp in front of the hotel and headed for his East Sixty-fifth street home.

Thousands of homeward-bound New Yorkers were torn by two contrasting political processions and personalities vieing for their cheers and support.

Security Act Scored.

Landon arrived in New York at 4:20 p. m. following a lunch-hour speech in the Mosque Theater in Newark, N. J., in which he once again raked the New Deal's social security act, denounced efforts to organize labor politically to "deliver" the labor vote and reaffirmed labor's "right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of its own choosing without interference by employers."

Landon used the labor phrase today, but not in a flat declaration.

"It is an old story," he said, "that labor has the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of its own choosing without interference by employers. But like many another old story, it needs to be emphasized and applied."

Platform Recalled.

In his acceptance speech, Landon said on the same subject:

"Under all circumstances, so states the Republican platform, employes are to be free from interference from any source, which means, as I read it, entire freedom from coercion or intimidation by the employer, any fellow employe or any other person."

On July 30, in answer to any inquiry as to their labor position, made by Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, Landon said:

"The members (of a union) have a right to meet among themselves or with others of their own choice to promote organization, with complete freedom from interference from anyone whatsoever. The workers should be fully protected in this right by the public authorities. This necessarily includes the right of a labor union to promote by lawful and proper means the organization of an unorganized industry, which includes the right to send in an organizer."

Large groups from district organizations and outside counties were masse dat the station when

Mack Garner, Famed Jockey, Dies of Sudden Heart Ailment

By the Associated Press.

Covington, Ky., Oct. 28.—Mack Garner, 36, for years one of the best known jockeys on the American turf, died late tonight following a heart attack.

Garner, one of four brothers, all of whom won acclaim as jockeys, rode four mounts today at River Downs, formerly Coney Island, and won the first race aboard Slant Eye.

Members of his family, with whom he resided here, said he complained of being ill when he returned from the River Downs track late today.

He took a turn for the worse several hours later, and collapsed about 10:20 o'clock.

He was dead upon arrival at a hospital.

He Won Derby in 1934.

Garner was astride Cavalcade when that horse won the Kentucky Derby in 1934. Garner had ridden n many derbies prior to that in his 19 years in the saddle, but not until then was he able to pilot a mount to victory in the most-sought-after stake in America.

Born in Centerville, Iowa, Garner won almost every major stake race in the country during his career. He won the Latonia Derby in 1921 with Brother Batch and captured the rich Belmont Stakes aboard Blue Larkspur in 1929.

In 1934 Garner almost scored a double victory in the Derby and

2 Candidates Make Last Bids For New York

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 28.—With its 47 electoral votes, New York's importance in the 1936 political picture is well evidenced by the appearance here today of both Franklin D. Roosevelt and Alf M. Landon.

Both the Democratic and Republican nominees, moreover, linked their final New York campaigning with a last appeal for the 16 electoral votes across the Hudson in New Jersey.

As a further demonstration that neither side is making any concessions in the East, the President also will visit Delaware tomorrow, driving around Wilmington by automobile.

Chairman James A. Farley and other Democratic leaders feel confident of victory in New York, with Farley claiming a majority of from 600,000 to 750,000. He counts on a Roosevelt lead approaching a million in New York City and on holding down the Landon lead upstate to around 300,000 to 400,000.

Republican leaders have ridiculed his New York City prediction and they, too, are confident of victory. Their margin of victory claim is smaller, 250,000. They believe Landon will sweep the up-State by around 750,000 and will hold Roosevelt down to 500,000 in New York City.

Both sides claim the benefit of the heavy increase in registration, which averaged around 15 per cent up-State and was 23 per cent in New York City. In the metropolis alone, the increase was around 500,000 for a total registration of almost 2,900,000.

Until recently, Chairman Farley and other leaders at the national headquarters here were not optimistic about the President's chances in New Jersey, normally Republican in presidential elections. He carried the State by 31,000 in the 1932 landslide. Now, they believe his chances have materially improved and they claim a victory across the Hudson.

Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., Eastern division manager of the Republican campaign, declares Gov. Landon will carry New Jersey easily and also Delaware, with its three electoral votes.

In predicting a Democratic victory in Jersey, Farley expressed belief the President will offset the rural and suburban Republican vote with a sweep in the larger cities of Newark and Trenton; that he will poll a heavy vote in Camden, and that the margin of victory will be in Hudson County, where Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City counts on a heavy Roosevelt majority.

Rural Strength Admitted.

Representative Martin asserts the Roosevelt majorities will be held down in these cities and that the normal Republican areas will pile up a sufficient vote to offset the cities and carry the State for Landon.

The Democratic leaders acknowledge that the rural vote in both New York and New Jersey will remain Republican, as in past years, inasmuch as the farm communities in these States have not shared under the New Deal's farm program to the extent of farmers in the South and West.

President Roosevelt's trip into Delaware attests to the belief of Farley and other leaders that he has a good chance to carry the State. Republican leaders are confident the State will remain Republican, but they took no chances and, on his swing into Pennsylvania, Gov. Landon spoke in Wilmington.

Contrary to the situation in New York and New Jersey, Democratic leaders believe the President will do well in the two rural counties of south Delaware and they believe he will get the bulk of the labor vote around Wilmington. There also is a large independent vote in the State, which keeps the politicians guessing.

Furthermore, the Democratic chances have been helped by an interparty Republican fight. There are two pictures of Republicans on the ballot, with two sets of Presidential electors. Although both sets are Landon electors, only the vote for one ticket can be counted in determining the victor, and not the total of both.

The vote in these three States, in the 1928 and 1932 Presidential elections, was:

New York—1928, (R.) 2,193,000, (D.) 2,089,000; 1932, (R.) 1,937,000, D.) 2,534,000.

In the New York State campaign, the high point is the candidacy of Gov. Herbert Lehman for a third term. He is opposed by a former Supreme Court justice, William F. Bleakley, long a Republican leader in Westchester County. There is no Senatorial contest.

Reed Recalls Fuss Roosevelt Made in '32 When Hoover Announced Gold Standard Danger.

By Franklyn Waltman

FORMER Senator James A. Reed on the radio the other night recounted, almost tearfully, to a Chicago audience a sad episode in his life. He said that after Herbert Hoover in the 1932 campaign at Des Moines had said this country in the previous January was within two weeks of going off the gold standard he had been summoned to Albany by Democratic Presidential Candidate Roosevelt and personally implored to answer this slander on the Nation's credit.

WALTMAN.

Mr. Reed explained that at Albany he met with experts who had evidence which refuted the Hoover contentions and that with this information he went to Des Moines and there denounced the then President for his remarks about the alleged weakness of the gold standard. The fiery Missourian indicated that in view of subsequent developments after Mr. Roosevelt's election he had a feeling of having been tricked.

This part of the Reed campaign speech brought back vivid memories to this observer. For instance, he remembered that one of the experts who supplied material for the Reed Des Moines speech was the economist of a Wall Street bank—a man who felt outraged over Mr. Hoover's contentions.

Memories more alive than others about that incident, however, center around the excellent speech made on the radio a week before the 1932 election by Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia. It was without doubt the best speech delivered in the 1932 campaign and I always have suspected that it had a great deal to do with the unprecedented size of Mr. Roosevelt's majority.

Senator Glass figuratively speaking had torn Mr. Hoover and his fiscal and tariff policies apart. He accused Mr. Hoover of submitting to Congress "inflationary proposals that would have rocked the foundations of our banking system."

He declared that if it were true that the United States was within two weeks of going off the gold standard, as Mr. Hoover had said, the latter's Administration was "guilty of amazing dishonesty" in failing "so to advise the banks and private investors," who have purchased some $3,709,000,000 of Treasury notes and certificates payable in gold between January 1 and June 30, 1932.

I remember Mr. Roosevelt the next day sitting at his desk in the library of the Governor's mansion at Albany, during a press conference, with the text of the Glass speech laid out before him. Never had he appeared to me more enthusiastic and laudatory about anything as he was about that speech. He regarded it as superb and said he had telegraphed congratulations to that effect to the Virginian.

I remember Mr. Roosevelt two days later standing on the stage of the Academy of Music in Brooklyn, N. Y., delivering the next to last major speech of his campaign. He declared that Mr. Hoover's contentions about abandonment of the gold standard was "a libel on the credit of the United States." He termed Senator Glass' speech on the subject a "magnificent philippic."

"And I might add," he asserted, "Senator Glass made a devastating challenge that no responsible government would have sold to the country securities payable in gold if it knew that the promise, yes, the covenant, embodied in these securities was as dubious as the President of the United States claims it was. Of course, the assertion was unsound."

Mr. Roosevelt that night complained "the President is seeing visions of rubber dollars" and he added that "this is only a part of his campaign of fear." He cited the platform pledge that "we advocate a sound currency to be preserved at all hazards." He said he stood on that platform. He recalled that on July 30, 1932, he had said: "Sound money is an international necessity; not a domestic consideration for one nation alone," and that at Butte, Mont., and Seattle had made clear his advocacy of a sound currency.

Thus, three times he had made clear his position in plain English, Mr. Roosevelt asserted, and it was "misrepresentation" for Mr. Hoover to suggest that he entertained any thoughts of tinkering with the currency. The truth is that I though Mr. Hoover had been unfair in making such suggestions. I accepted Mr. Roosevelt's words at their face value.

* * *

Like kaleidoscopic scenes, I remember the events of 1933: The issuance in March of Treasury securities payable in gold; the abandonment of the gold standard in April; the abrogation of all gold clauses in June; the Roosevelt message torpedoing the London Economic and Monetary Conference in July with its assertion that "the sound internal economic system of a Nation is a greater factor in its well-being than the price of its currency in changing terms of the currencies of the world" and its proposal of a commodity dollar.

I remember the abortive Warren gold purchase program of October and I remember the devaluation of the dollar in January, 1934, by reducing its gold content. More vividly, perhaps, than the rest I remember Senator Glass arising in the Senate when the latter proposal was about to be adopted. Every seat but one was filled—all members faced the aged Virginian.

In a hush in which the drop of a pin could have been heard, Senator Glass commenced his denunciation of that legislation by recalling that the congratulatory messages he had received on his speech of the 1932 campaign had filled a huge scrapbook and that the first message therein was from the incumbent President of the United States.

* * *

The recital of these events needs no further comment. Yet there are persons who continue to insist that Mr. Roosevelt in 1932 did not mislead the country as to what it could expect from his Administration. Like ostriches, they bury their heads in the sand and refuse to see or listen.

Tugwell Cites RA Collections, Assails Critics

Says Loans' Repayment Is Answer to Charges of Waste.

In one of the few statements he has issued this year, Rexford G. Tugwell hit out yesterday at critics of the Resettlement Administration with an assertion that "the record of collections answers once and for all prejudiced and partisan criticism" of the agency.

Announcing that 76.5 per cent of money due on rehabilitation loans had been repaid on October 1, Tugwell said that fact answered charges that "through these loans the government is throwing its money to the wind."

"In my opinion," he added, "the preponderant majority of farmers under the rehabilitation program will pay out their debt 100 per cent."

He said that of $8,552,688 principal due on loans at the start of this month, $6,543,897 had been collected.

Total loans to farmers from Federal relief funds by the Tugwell agency since its organization in July last year were said to aggregate $87,066,409 to more than 350,000 farm families.

The loans were made for from one to five years with interest of from 2 to 5 per cent, spokesmen said. The repayments involve only principal, they added.

"The figures are more startling when we consider the fact that the farmers receiving these loans were principally relief cases," Tugwell said.

Collections "would have been much higher," Tugwell added, if the summer drought had not caused delinquency in some areas.

"The business-like administration of these loans is making many farmers self-respecting and self-sustaining," he asserted.

President Backed Against RedCharge

President Roosevelt was defended against charges that he leans toward communism last night by Stanley Reed, Solicitor General of the United States, who spoke at Hyattsville under auspices of the Democratic State Central Committee of Maryland.

Reed said that the President's first act on assuming office was to rehabilitate the Nation's banking structure, "which was broken down completely under the high priests of finance that always had dominated the Republican Party."

Within six months the President had made the banking system stronger and more vigorous than at any time in the Nation's history, Reed said, and asked his listeners: "Could that be communism?"

Reed said that millions in loans through the HOLC and the FCA now are flowing back into the Treasury in an endless stream of payments, proving that efforts to rehabilitate homes and farms have been successful.

Other speakers were Leslie C. Garnett, United States Attorney for Washington, and Ralph W. Powers, candidate for the State Legislature. H. Winship Wheatley, sr., former president of the District Bar Association, presided.

District to Survey Other Cities' Costs

District department heads were instructed to make comparative studies of the costs of operating their departments in relation to cities of like size to Washington at a conference yesterday with the Commissioners.

A special committee was appointed to gather the data to be used in a report that may be submitted to the President's fiscal relations committee. It comprises Edward R. Pierce, fire battalion chief, chairman, and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, and Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger Hospital.

The survey is an outgrowth of questions raised by the President's fiscal relations committee at the public hearing last Friday and Saturday. District officials explained that they have received no request for the justification of administrative expenses but that they want to be prepared in case a request is forthcoming.

Wireless Pioneer Dies.

New York, Oct. 28 (AP).—William J. Blenheim, 58, who established the first commercially operated wireless telegraph circuits in the world, under British government contract, died here today.

The Campaign Arena

The Republican National Committee said yesterday that the Senate Campaign Funds Committee "has whitewashed all other New Deal agencies."

Commenting on the Senate group's refusal to conduct public hearings in Pennsylvania before election on charges of political abuses in the WPA, the Republican statement asserted:

"All of the accused deny the charges. This satisfies the Lonergan committee. It does not satisfy the people of the United States who are having daily experience with the actual facts of the New Deal rackets."

New York, Oct. 28 (AP).—James A. Farley, chairman of the National Democratic Committee, commenting on the charge of Gov. Alfred M. Landon that President Roosevelt had broken promises to extend the merit system in the civil service, said yesterday:

"If Gov. Landon is not more concerned about the civil service in the Nation than he has been in his own State of Kansas, we cannot hope for much improvement."

New York, Oct. 28 (AP).—Alexander Woollcott announced himself for President Roosevelt last night in a radio speech.

"Mr. Roosevelt is a sympathetic, courageous, resourceful, tireless and enormously capable man who has served in the White House through four incredibly difficult years," Woollcott said. "Now we are asked to replace him, with all the good he has done and all the lessons he has learned, by a man who has no comparable experience whatever."

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 28 (AP).—Complete official figures compiled by the Associated Press disclosed today 6,216,438 registered voters in New York State, an increase of 16 per cent, an all-time record. The highest previous total was 5,350,822 registered in 1932.

Norristown, Pa., Oct. 28 (AP).—United States Representative Henry B. Steagall (Democrat), of Alabama, said Gov. Alf M. Landon "is on record repeatedly as opposed to any method of bank deposit insurance and no word has come to us that he has changed his views."

Since enactment of the bank deposit act, which he sponsored as chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee, Steagall said there have been only 62 failures of insured banks and that their depositors have been paid 99 per cent of their deposits.

Chicago, Oct. 28 (AP).—John Raymond McCarl, former Comptroller General of the United States, declared today "the desertion of the people by the 'economy' Congress was the real tragedy of 1933."

In an address prepared for delivery before the Chicago Association of Commerce, he asserted "we must * * * get back to self-government" by electing a Congress that will "quit surrendering its authority to the Executive—and it must require economy in Government."

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 28 (AP).—The New York State Election Bureau said today citizens desiring to vote for Representative William Lemke for President would have difficulty if they vote in districts using machines.

Lemke supporters must write the names of 47 electors on the ballot and the space on the machines for this purpose is 2½ inches long and 2 inches high. All the names must be crowded into this space.

Philadelphia, Oct. 28 (AP).—The all-Philadelphia Roosevelt committee said today Marshall Field, Chicago and New York business man, had announced his intention to support President Roosevelt for re-election.

The committee said Field had "offered his name as indorsement" to a nonpartisan appraisal of the New Deal prepared by Francis Biddle, chairman of the committee; William Stix Wasserman, investment banker, and Arthur S. Paul, hosiery manufacturer.

there is something more than propaganda at the bottom of the story, and whatever it is it accentuates the menace to European peace arising out of the Spanish civil war.

Worried by Activities.

Both the British and French governments are seriously worried by the Italian activities in Mallorca and there is reason to believe that strong pressure is being brought to bear in Rome to prevent Premier Mussolini's doing anything in the Mediterranean which would aggravate the present situation. There is some suggestion that the British foreign office is taking advantage of the visit to London of Joachim von Ribbentrop, new German Ambassador to Great Britain, to enlist German support in soft pedaling Il Duce.

In the meantime, the French press, apparently in obedience to official suggestion that the subject is dynamite, has carefully avoided publishing a statement officially issued by the Spanish Embassy here on the responsibility of the Spanish Ambassador. Even those papers which are most sympathetic to the Madrid government have so far failed even to mention the communique. One afternoon paper published it under a London date-line, attributing the information to the London Times without mentioning that the Times had received it from the Spanish Embassy in Paris.

Bonds Racket Affidavits Cite County Officers

Automobile Club's Charges in Prince Georges Are Filed With Bowie.

Names of bondsmen, policemen and justices of the peace allegedly involved in the Prince Georges County bonding racket, were placed before State's Attorney Allan Bowie, at Marlboro yesterday by officials of the Keystone Automobile Club.

Affidavits signed by 80 motorists who charge they were swindled will be turned over to Bowie later this week, George Keneipp, manager of the automobile club, and Harvey Cobb, its attorney, announced.

Bowie said he would check records in each of the 80 cases to determine their final disposition. Bowie declared sufficient evidence has been presented to convince him there is a pressing need to revamp the present system of keeping county police records.

Within the next two weeks, Bowie said, he will determine whether there is sufficient evidence of a widespread bonding racket to justify the appointment of a special investigator if one is needed, Bowie said.

Cobb said the 80 affidavits collected by the automobile club illustrate how policemen, working in collusion with bondsmen, arrested motorists on serious traffic charges which were "fixed" later after payment of large sums to the bondsmen.

Investigation of another alleged racket in the county was started yesterday after motorists had complained the county policemen "cooperate" with certain garages which charge exorbitant fees to tow wrecked cars off the highways.

Internal Upheaval Europe's Real Peril Rather Than War, Says Polish Envoy

Denying that fear of a general conflagration is all-absorbing in the Europe of today, Count Jerzy Potocki, newly appointed Ambassador of Poland to the United States, yesterday said in an interview that the real danger lies in the concentrated dynamite of internal social upheaval.

"The people of Europe do not want war," he declared. "When officials utter war-like pronunciamentos they do it usually for home consumption. Totalitarian states cannot afford disunion in their ranks."

Outlining the administrative set-up in Poland under Inspector General Rydz-Smigly, Count Potocki denied democratic processes have been abolished. He said that the late Marshal Pilsudski in an unwritten testimony before his death conferred all his military powers in the hands of Gen. Smigly.

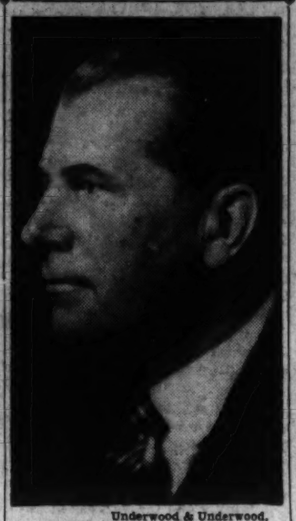
Country United.

"One year has passed since the marshal's death and already the army and the country are as one behind their present chief," he said. "In a short time the Republic's president will confer on him the marshal's baton in token of the work he has accomplished in the interests of internal unity. Gen. Rydz-Smigly is not a dictator but a soldier and a statesman. He is an outstanding figure in a political and military sense."

What of the Lithuanian question, he was asked. Lithuania and Poland for some time now have been engaged in diplomatic back-biting. The former nation charges that Poland flouts the rights of minorities; the latter answers with the counter-charge that Lithuania resorts to systematic persecution.

"The Polish-Lithuanian situatoin is an unusual one," Warsaw's envoy declared. "For, though both nations are neighbors they have neither passport, postal nor diplomatic relations. Communications, too, have been severed by railway, air and road; in every respect there exists a state of complete isolation."

The count accused Lithuania of making "a hobby" of the Vilna question and emphasized that that city is "an integral part of Poland." Vilna was awarded to Poland after the Treaty of Versailles over the protests of Lithuania that the population was chiefly Lettish.



Underwood & Underwood.
COUNT JERZY POTOCKI.

The Polish Ambassador admitted, however, that the Jewish problem was pressing, but reiterated that the policy of the government is to "keep down boycott and aggression."

"We have 3,000,000 Jews in Poland," he said. "Their very numbers demand serious attention and adjustment. There is no marked hostility toward them, though in a few chavenistic Polish quarters there is a tendency to disregard the government's edicts and to discriminate."

Count Potocki thinks American press accounts of the "Danzig tinder box" are "grossly exaggerated" and scouted as "improbable" the rumor of a Nazi-Danzig putsch. He said that Poland will not meddle in the Free City's internal affairs, but would "object strongly" if a foreign nation interfered with Polish rights in that area.

Relations with the Soviet are now "quite good," the envoy said, stating that fewer attacks on the Warsaw government are featured in the Russian press.

Poland, like the other countries, is internally occupied with the fight against unemployment. Constructive public works—building roads and canals—are a big factor in the recovery program. Next spring labor battalions, not unlike the Civilian Conservation Corps, though on a semi-military basis, will be formed and the young unemployed of the land will be drafted into units.

Count Patocki Praises Gen. Rydz-Smigly's Democratic Rule.

The new Polish Ambassador was born in 1889, in Vienna. After graduating from the college Lwow in 1907 he studied law at Oxford and Lwow, where he received his degrees. He also pursued agricultural studies at the University of Halle, Germany.

In 1905 Poland was still partitioned between the great eastern powers and Potocki joined the cause of the youthful independence movement.

During the World War he served at the front with the armies of the Austrian Empire, and in 1919 he entered active service in the Polish army with the rank of captain in the Third Regiment of Uhlans. Subsequently he was sent by the general staff to head the Polish military mission to Budapest.

Aid to Pilsudski.

On his return from the Hungarian capital Potocki was appointed aide de camp to Marshal Pilsudski. He acted in that capacity until the end of 1920, then saw active service in those critical days for Poland in their death struggle with the Soviets.

Peace found Count Potocki devoting his time to economic and social work on the territory of the province of Tarnopol. From May, 1926, he participated actively in many political organizations as president of the Association of Legionnaires, as well as of the Union of Riflemen in the county of Zborow. In 1930 he was selected to represent the district of Tarnopol in the Polish Senate.

On June 2, 1933, Poticki was appointed ambassador at Angora, the capital of the government of the Turkish republic. He was appointed to his present post in May of this year.

The new ambassador has been decorated with the Order of Polonia Restituta and the Cross for Bravery. He also holds a number of foreign decorations.

Alabama Trial Opens in Death Of Federal Aid

Articles Found on Body of Wesley D. Amott Are Identified.

By the Associated Press.

Wetumpka, Ala., Oct. 28.—Prosecutors at the Frank E. Green murder trial today offered evidence intended to prove the mutilated body of a man found near Fays Station September 5 was that of Wesley D. Amott, of Washington, D. C., Federal Resettlement investigator.

Green is accused of slaying him on a motor trip.

Chief Deputy Sheriff Herbert Richardson testified a laundry mark taken from the trousers bore the name "Amott." Only 31 cents was found on the body, he said.

Richardson identified a belt, necktie, pair of shoes, fragments of clothing, gold pocket watch and pearl-handled knife as objects taken from the clothing of the victim, who was left lying face downward at the edge of a cotton field.

Defense counsel objected to introduction of the objects before the jury, but Judge Arthur Glover overruled them.

The Rev. J. M. Green, of Salem Baptist Church at Mount Pinson, Ala., brother of the defendant, sat at the counsel table as the trial started.

C. R. Amott, of Indianapolis, brother of Wesley Amott, was present as a State witness. Wesley Amott, a native of Salt Lake City, was a former missionary of the Latter Day Saints Church.

Green was on probation from a robbery sentence at Washington, authorities said today, and was reporting monthly under parole to the United States probation officer at Montgomery.

Cotton Textile President Calls Japan 'Menace'

By the United Press.

New York,, Oct. 28.—Dr. Claudius T.Murchison, president of the powerful Cotton Textile Institute, told its annual meeting today that Japan was a "potential menace to our general social and economic standards."

The threat of expanding Japanese competition, more effectively than any other influence, has taken from us once once profitable export markets in Latin America and the Far East, Murchison said. "More recently it has taken from us over half of our export business to the Philippines.

"It is now probing aggressively for entrance into the home market and at a time when the industry has voluntarily diminished its competitive effectiveness by the substantial maintenance of the code standard of wages and hours.

"Japanese competition, therefore, not only constitutes a threat to our prosperity, it is also a potential menace to our general social and economic standards."

Murchison said there was no single pathway toward a solution and pointed out that American textile workers may obtain some relief under existing legislation, through the quota system or under new legislation.

Murchison suggested "private negotiations between the two countries . . . to acquaint the Japanese fully with the factual situation confronting the American industry and to so interpret these facts as to make possible voluntary adjustment of exports to the United States in line with the obvious logic of economic and political reasoning."

If this plan fails, he said, "we have no recourse but to action which is unilateral and directly restrictive."

Chinese Forecast Asiatic War Soon

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), Oct. 29.—"An Asiatic war within a year or possibly within a month," was forecast by Chinese officials today following demands on China for acceptance of Tokyo's proposals for a general settlement of Chino-Japanese differences.

China positively is prepared to resist with force efforts of the Japanese to impose terms on the country "which would be tantamount to making parts of China into virtual vassal states of Japan," the officials said.

Mrs. Simpson Retires To Six-Month Seclusion

London, Oct. 28 (AP).—Wallis Warfield Simpson today began the six-month period of guarded activity necessary to obtain absolute freedom to marry anybody she chooses.

Granted a decree nisi from her former husband, Ernest Aldrich Simpson, the dark-eyed companion of King Edward withdrew to the seclusion of her Cumberland Terrace home, and was "not at home" to any one.

Queen Mary's Crew Mourns Captain's Death

Southampton, England, Oct. 28 (AP).—The British liner Queen Mary was steaming toward New York tonight, her crew grieving over the death of the vessel's first commander, Commodore Sir Edgar Britten.

Capt. R. V. Peel took over command of the vessel Tuesday night after Sir Edgar died in a Southampton nursing home following a paralytic stroke. He was 62.

Writ Urges Court To Nullify Bequest For Baby Marathon

Toronto, Ontario, Oct. 28 (AP).—The "baby clause" of the Millar will was attacked in court late today by persons claiming to be next of kin and seeking the $500,000 fortune.

A writ filed on behalf of Alexander Butcher and Arabella West, of Port Burwell, Ontario, called the "baby clause" "scandalous" and "contrary to public policy," and asked the court to declare it void.

The surprise attack on the will of the eccentric lawyer came a few hours after executors of the estate had called upon all claimants under the will to appear in court November 6 with their proofs.

The announcement by the executors and the subsequent court assault on the will sent a sudden stab of fear into the hearts of half a dozen mothers, for it carried a hint that their ten years of prodigious child bearing may, after all, have been financially in vain.

Fascist Italy Marks 14th Anniversary

Rome, Oct. 28 (AP).—Blackshirt Italy celebrated the fourteenth anniversary of the famous "march on Rome" today and entered a fifteenth year of fascism, pridefully conscious that Premier Benito Mussolini had kept most of his platform promises.

Whipped to fever-pitch enthusiasm by Il Duce's shouted boast, "We have conquered our place in the sun. Our pride is legitimate," thousands of Blackshirts, young Fascists and university students paraded down Empire street past the Palazzo Venezia.

Il Duce's platform, in part, called for consolidation of national life and political direction, elevation of Italian prestige abroad, development of a military nation capable of viewing calmly any world crisis and territorial expansion as an outlet for Italy's compressed population.

Chrysler Fined $11 On Game Violation

Baltimore, Oct. 28 (AP).—Walter P. Chrysler, automobile manufacturer, pleaded guilty in United States District Court today to two charges of violating the Federal regulations for duck hunting and paid fines totaling $11.

William T. Pritchett, superintendent of Chrysler's Maryland estate, pleaded guilty to similar charges and paid similar fines, $10 on one charge and $1 on the other.

Federal game agents said the violations occurred last December 6. The charges were using automatic shotguns that had not been plugged to limit their capacity to three shells and failing to have Federal migratory bird stamps in their possession.

Quadruplets Born.

Kaunas, Lithuania, Oct. 28 (AP).—Quadruplets, two boys and two girls, were born today to the wife of a laborer in Marijampole, Southern Lithuania. The same woman in 1934 bore triplets, all of whom died almost immediately after birth.

Break Expected In Frigid Wave This Afternoon

While Washingtonians shivered and piled on blankets, the forecaster said today would see a rising temperature, probably high in the 50's.

This morning, however, there probably will be frost, officials asserted, with the temperature around 32 at 7 a. m.

After a chilling forenoon yesterday, the Capital thawed out in the afternoon, with a reading of 54 at 3:30 p. m. Yesterday's low was 27 at 7 a. m.

Nearby Maryland's first real cold spell of the fall, meanwhile, brought the mercury in Baltimore down to an October record and chilled the rest of the State correspondingly.

Official minimum in Baltimore was 29.6 degrees at 6 a. m. yesterday. It was the lowest October record on the books for the Weather Bureau there.

In the District yesterday morning, the mercury dipped below the freezing point for the second consecutive day, coming within 1 degree of equalling a 63-year-old cold record for the month when it reached its low of 27.

Air Mail Opened To Live Animals, Skunks Barred

If Aunt Gertie wants to send her goldfish on a quick trip to the West Coast, or craves lobsters from Maine for luncheon tomorrow, she can depend on the Postoffice Department to help her by air mail.

Certain live animals, including goldfish, lobsters, soft crabs, baby terrapins, bloodworms and chameleons can now be shipped by air, acording to a decree yesterday from Harlee Branch, Assistant Postmaster General.

"But our pilots are not zoo keepers," on postal official said. "and skunks are out." Animals with offensive odor and those that might require food or water en route are still barred. Baby chicks are taboo, too, no matter how they are packed, nor how short the journey. They perish in high altitudes.

To the Department of Agriculture goes the credit for enabling queen bees to take to the air as "mail." They were formerly barred because they cannot stand being packed together in mailbags. In answer to hundreds of requests, the Department of Agriculture enlisted the aid of expert apiarists, and now the queen bees, each one packed in a tiny, private compartment, can be flown with safety.

Huge Welcome Greets Landon Arrival in N. Y.

Landon arrived here. A parade started behind Landon's car, with the marchers flaunting signs. "Raise pigs, not taxes," 'Have a thought for tomorrow" and "Security with Landon."

Up Fifth avenue wound the procession, past the towering Empire State Building and the office of Alfred E. Smith, Landon's outstanding Democratic ally. Landon reached his hotel at 5 p. m. and for another half-hour bands and marchers were still stringing by.

Conversation 'Staged.'

For 35 minutes tonight Smith and Landon were closeted together in Landon's hotel suite. They came out smiling, and posed for photographers. Reporters heard only part of their conversation, and that was carefully staged.

"I am delighted to be in the great City of New York and I am glad indeed to meet you, sir," said Landon, clasping Smith's hand.

"Well, Governor," he said, "I am sure that the splendid reception you received must have convinced you that you are very welcome in New York, and I want to tell you that you have many more friends among the Democrats of New York than you have any idea of."

Landon placed one hand on Smith's shoulder and a reporter told him to move closer to Al.

"We are as close together as we can get and we will stick together, I hope, for a long time," Landon replied.

"Yes, it was," Al replied.

"How did you like him?"

"Very much, indeed," replied Smith. "He is very clear-headed, very much to the point, very sound and very sensible."

Shies at Prediction.

Smith was asked how he thought the election is going.

"That puts me in the position of predicting results of the election, which I have always refused to do," he replied.

Landon was asked if he had anything further to say.

"Nothing," he said, "except I was delighted to meet Gov. Smith and admire him very much indeed."

The political love feast over, Gov. Landon sat down to a late dinner with Miss Theresa Cahill, 50-year-old former nurse of his oldest child, 19-year-old Peggy Ann Landon. Miss Cahill now lives in New York.

Gov. Landon will motor to Sagamore Hill, Oyster Bay, tomorrow morning to greet the widow of Theodore Roosevelt and visit the grave of the former President.

In Newark at noon, speaking as one who has "worked with my own hands" and "earned wages," Landon said he was eager to co-operate with the workers of America, in whose cause he expressed a deep sympathy. But like the late Samuel Gompers, he urged labor keep itself from "from entanglement with any political group" apparently referring, though not by name, to Labor's Nonpartisan League efforts to swing the worker vote to Roosevelt.

"We are witnessing in this country today an effort to introduce into the camp of American labor the European system of political alliances, which invariably victimizes labor," he said.

Warns of Dissension.

Landon declared leaders frequently arise who make that claim, but asserted no one can deliver the labor, farm or any other class vote because "there are no classes in America. We are one people, no matter how much we differ. Any one who promises to 'deliver' the labor vote," he said, "is sowing the seeds of destruction for all of us."

Renewing his attack on the social security act, Landon said its burdens will fall mainly on the worker, who he said will have to pay for it in pay envelope deductions and indirectly in reduced employment, higher prices or lower wages.

In its place he proposed to provide assistance to the needy, blind and crippled, to foster the promotion of child welfare, improve the public health service and "encourage adoption by the States of honest and practical programs of unemployment insurance." To every American over 65 he pledged supplementary payments to provide protection from want without requiring "the pauper's oath."

Thrift Demanded.

He further proposed Federal grants-in-aid by the States, to be financed on a "pay-as-you-go" basis, funds to be raised "by means of a special tax, directly levied and widely distributed."

Gov. Hoffman of New Jersey, who with a committee of State and Essex County Republican leaders joined the Landon train at Trenton, introduced Landon to the 5,000 persons jammed into the Mosque Theater.

Led by a blaring red-uniformed band, atop a van, the Landon procession, with a mounted police escort, took a winding route through noon-hour throngs to the Mosque Theater.

New Trial Plea Is Set In Dill Balm Verdict

Mount Vernon, Ohio, Oct. 28 (AP).—Common Pleas Judge P. L. Wilkins today placed on the docket for hearing next Monday a new trial motion by former Senator C. C. Dill, against whom Margie Heaton Dill obtained a $5,000 judgment for alienation of affections.

The motion, alleging error, has been pending since May 21, when a jury made the award against the former Senator and his sister-in-law, Mrs. Grace Dill, of Fredericktown.

Margie Heaton Dill, 20-year-old stenographer, charged her mother-in-law and the one-time Senator from Washington alienated the affections of her husband, Wendell M. Dill, also 20.

Mormons' Reserve Of Food, Clothing To Be Given Needy

Salt Lake City, Oct. 28 (AP).—The Latter Day Saints Church will open its bounteous storehouses—filled in a program to take all unemployed members "off relief"—to the needy November 1.

The "budget system" will govern distribution of food, clothing and medical supplies to about 15,000 persons reported eligible for aid, said administrators.

A dozen strategically located storehouses were crammed with preserved food and home-made clothing throughout the summer.

Better Homes Pledged to All By Roosevelt

to Williamsburg Bridge, "inspecting" housing projects en route, although the "inspection" consisted of passing slowly beside a long board fence surrounding a deep excavation, and then set out through lower Manhattan for the ferry to Governors Island.

The city crowds in New York were uniformly heavy and interested, cheering the passage of the President's car briefly, and then whispering loudly "The G-Men!" at every one of the next 20 cars of White House staff members, newspapermen and photographers. Some scattered boos were heard in the midst of loud cheers.

Ferrying to Governors Island, the President lunched and then embarked by ferry once more for Bedloes Island and the Statue of Liberty.

Halfway across the bay the President asked his bodyguard, Gus Gennerich, to get out his silk hat. Donning this, he remarked that he always put it on at the international zero line.

Tugs, naval cruisers and small craft broke out their flags as the President, aboard the old red Murray Hill, venerable queen of the ferries, chugged across the bay flying the White House emblem. The U. S. S. Indianapolis sounded 21 guns and all Navy craft stood by with crew at salute until the President's boat had swept by.

Narrowly missing going aground near the new dock, built 10 days ago for the occasion, the Murray Hill tied up behind the great weathered-green copper statue of Miss Liberty. The following boat, carrying the French Ambassador, M. Andre de Laboulaye, grandson of the man who conceived the statute, and the French official party, did go aground, delaying the ceremonies for some time.

On the island, in an elaborate program including an international broadcast bearing the return greetings of United States Ambassador to France William C. Bullitt and Albert LeBrun, President of France, the President made an unusually literary address, in which he emphasized repeatedly that America is "the place of the second chance."

Emigrants Praised.

Stressing his belief that the emigrants to America were "not the laggards, not the failures, nor the timorous," the President praised their "supreme courage," and went on to suggest that Grover Cleveland's dedication idea of liberty enlightening the world should be "broadened," to include an American "message of peace."

In sharp contrast to this scholarly, thoughtfully phrased address was the short but homespun plea of the President at Sarah Delano Roosevelt Park in the lower East Side, where he talked about better housing to an audience that completely filled the vast playground, one block wide and 7½ blocks long.

Mayor LaGuardia, Ferdinand Pecora, former member of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and Gov. Herbert H. Lehman addressed the vast throng briefly before the President spoke.

Demands Better Homes.

After his short talk, which significantly included the phrase "We have not yet begun to spend money adequately in order to help the families in the overcrowded sections of our cities to live as American citizens have a right to live," the President rode off through the cheering New Yorkers, this time waving a bouquet of roses presented him by a group of children from the playground, of which Mayor LaGuardia had said:

"It was a terrible garbage heap. Now it's the biggest playground in the world."

Exports Lead Importations For September

For the first month since May, United States exports exceed imports in September, the Commerce Department announced yesterday. The trade balance for the first nine months of the year, however, remained unfavorable to the United States.

"In my opinion," he said, "our economic progress is as well, if not better, reflected in our imports than in our exports. While the improvement in export trade, both agricultural and non-agricultural, has been gratifying, I find the increase in import trade to be equally encouraging."

Exports amounted to $219,967,000 in September, compared with $178,314,000 in August and with $193,803,000 in September, 1935. Imports amounted to $215,525,000 in September compared with $200,091,000 in August and $166,623,000 in September, 1935. The excess of exports over imports in September was $4,442,000.

The import increases were due largely to increased shipments of rubber, sugar, paper manufactures, unmanufactured tobacco, wheat and paper base stock.

Roper attacked the Republican National Committee for distributing figures concerning importation of wheat and other farm products without explaining that much of this importation was made necessary by the drought. In September, the United States imported $487,000 bushels of wheat compared with 14,000 bushels in September last year. For the first nine months of the year wheat imports amounted to 882,000 bushels, compared with 156,000 bushels during the same period last year.

Fear Expressed for 150 On Ice-Locked Craft

Harbin (Thursday), Oct. 29 (AP). Fears were expressed today for the safety of 150 passengers on the Manchukuo steamer Haian which has been frozen in the ice in the upper Amur River in a wild and uninhabited region between Moho and Heiho.

The government dispatched airplanes to search for the stranded vessel which is without communication and is understood to lack sufficient food and winter clothing for passengers and crew.

Twenty-four passengers were feared lost after they abandoned the steamer October 24 to seek refuge by land. They have not been heard from since they left.

Ickes Pictures Gov. Landon as 'Jekyll-Hyde'

Secretary Says Nominee 'Gets Wires Crossed;' Speaks of Fascism.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 28.—Gov. Alf M. Landon was pictured by Secretary Harold I. Ickes tonight as a "political Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," who beckoned the country toward communism or fascism.

Asserting the Republican Presidential nominee had been represented as "facing both ways," Ickes sought to show that "East-bound Landon" stood for different policies from those enunciated while the Kansan was West-bound on his campaign tours.

The Interior Secretary, at Carnegie Hall, lashed out at what he termed the "extraordinary record of this personally pleasant and politically pliant candidate," saying:

"The trouble with Gov. Landon is that he hasn't been able to keep from getting his wires crossed. He finds it impossible to remember what he stood for, when or where.

Reactionary Lines.

"But since he has finished his speaking tour in the West and is beating the bushes in the East for stray votes, Gov. Landon may be expected to stick to his reactionary lines until election day. * * *

"We know that Candidate Landon's proposed reactionary retrenchment can lead but to communism or fascism.

New York especially would welcome an elaboration of Mr. Landon's stand against monopolies and special privilege, Ickes said, adding:

"I know of no more fitting place for Jack the Monopoly Killer to do his stuff."

Edward A. Filene, Boston financier and merchant, speaking on the same program, said he refused to concede the contention that the New Deal has been extravagant, for, he said, "it has already paid for itself over and over again."

Increase in Income.

"To be sure, we have increased our net debt by six and a half billions," he said, "but by doing this, we have already increased our national income by 20 billions a year; which, from a business standpoint, was a most wise investment."

While admitting that it "hurts a bit" to pay "half of my income every year" to the tax collectors, Filene declared himself in favor of still higher income taxes in the upper brackets.

"Why shouldn't the American people take half my money from me?" he said. "I took all of it from them."

Praises Money Move.

Cleveland, Oct. 28 (AP).—Homer Cummings, United States Attorney General, tonight said President Roosevelt when he devalued the dollar "shifted the money center of America from Wall Street to Washington."

"Speaking a few days ago at Philadelphia, Mr. Hoover took occasion to deplore the devaluation," Cummings said in his address, prepared for radio delivery before the Democratic Lawyers Club of Cleveland.

"I do not pause to debate the issue, because not a fraction of 1 per cent of our people agree with him; because no responsible voice is raised anywhere in America demanding a return to the old ratio or the old system * * *," Cummings said.

2,000 to Take Part In Halloween Fete

Advance entries for the Halloween parade Saturday night indicate more than 2,000 children will take part in the line of march, riding on floats, marching with groups, in bands or entering as individual costumed marchers, Col. Goring Bliss, chairman of the celebration, has reported.

"The interest of so many boys and girls in the Halloween parade is gratifying," Col. Bliss said. "For every one of those participating there probably will be five on the sidelines watching. And this comes near to accomplishing the goal of the celebration—to present wholesome entertainment for boys and girls who otherwise might be involved in the usual Halloween pranks that cause much damage and annoyance."

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of the Metropolitan Police, also expressed his gratification at the enthusiasm being shown in the celebration.

Blum Cleared of Fraud.

Paris, Oct. 28 (AP).—The courts today dismissed a suit by the Taxpayers Federation against Premier Leon Blum charging he defrauded the public by pressing sale of government bonds, knowing that secret devaluation negotiations were being conducted. The courts declared the premier acted in his official rather than personal capacity and that Parliament ratified his actions.

Board Calls Poster a Forgery

Deductions from Pay Start Jan. 1

Beginning January 1, 1937, your employer will be compelled by law to deduct a certain amount from your wages every payday. This is in compliance with the terms of the Social Security Act signed by President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, August 14, 1935.

To the amount taken from your wages, your employer is required to pay, in addition, either an equal or double amount. The combined taxes may total 9% of the whole payroll.

SOCIAL SECURITY BOARD

taxes may total 9 per cent of the whole pay roll.

"This is not a voluntary plan. Your employer must make this deduction. Regulations are published by—

"Social Security Board
"Washington, D. C."

In connection with this poster, the board issued the following statement:

"No regulations dealing with wage deductions have been published by the Social Security Board. No instructions to employers to post such notices have been issued by the Social Security. Any effort to have the name of the board appear as a signature to such notices is misrepresentation and fraud.

Unauthorized Use.

"The Social Security Board can not ignore this unauthorized and misleading use of its name on posters which is impeding the orderly processes of administering the social security act. The board feels it is its duty, in view of such misuse of its name, to bring these posters to the attention of the Department of Justice for investigation as to authorship and responsibility for circulation."

The security board has complained that in some instances inclosures have been put into pay envelopes indicating that the New Deal is responsible for a pay cut beginning January 1.

The Des Moines arrest was made under the State election law, according to the Associated Press, which provides that all political advertisements or circulars must bear the name of the person or organization distributing them.

Green in his radio talk explained the provisions of the old-age pension plan, whereby employes and employers each will contribute 1 per cent of the pay rolls beginning January 1, gradually increasing to 3 per cent each.

"The fund thus created will be carefully supervised and administered by the Federal Government," he said. "No greater security than that could be provided for such a fund."

"This is a form of legislation for which workers have prayed and petioned for many years. The American Federation of Labor favored the enactment of this law. It gave its indorsement and support when it was passed by Congress."

Hamilton attacked the provision of the law which puts the money collected for social security into the general funds, where, he said, it may be used for any purpose the Government sees fit. He challenged the statement of President Roosevelt that "your dollars are held in a Government trust fund solely for the social security of the workers." In view of this statement, he said, he questioned whether the President had read the law.

"The language," he said, addressing Mr. Roosevelt, "simply does not provide what you stated it did.

"The money taken from our workers' pay envelopes, and taken from every employer of labor in addition, which starts off at 2 cents this January on every 99 cents the workers receive, and eventually reached 9 cents for every 97 cents the worker receives, goes into the general fund of the Treasury.

"Once there it can be used for any purpose the politicians elected to Congress decide. If you should ever succeed in balancing the budget it would eventually pay off the national debt, so that the workers would have paid it and the rich you talk about taxing would escape that burden."

Hamilton said three States already had sent money to Washington under the unemployment insurance provisions of the law and "their money went into the pot to pay current bills." He suggested that in case of war every dollar the workers contributed would be spent.

The Republican chairman said that, while the Townsend plan proposed only a 2 per cent tax, the security law provides a 9 per cent pay-roll tax. He said the tax would be passed on to the consumer.

Hidden Tax.

"What sort of a hidden tax would that be on a pair of shoes, Mr. President?" he asked.

Hard in his broadcast said that, while the worker must pay the security tax from his income, the employer will pass his share along to the consumer so that the worker eventually will pay that, too.

the girls yesterday to invest their money wisely. Mrs. Elsie Ring, a bride of two weeks, and whose birthday anniversary coincided with the running of the Cambridgeshire, said part of her birthday present will be used to buy a house.

Mrs. Margaret Hanuseck said she will take her son out of a CCC camp, but the others had not decided what they will do with their $15,000 winnings. They are Mrs. Margaret Morrell, Mrs. Sarah Wills, Mrs. Lucy Bauman, Mrs. Adeline Clauwers, Mrs. Julia Sachewitz, Mrs. Catherine Hanley and Mrs. Marie Schwarnder.

The $150,000 windfall almost struck Mrs. Percy H. Hooker, of Durham, N. C., speechless. She, too, held a ticket on Dan Bulger.

"I hardly know what to say. We are so happy."

That was about all her trembling lips could muster. Her husband, a furniture store employe, said he will "keep on working."

The couple turned down a $20,000 offer for their ticket Tuesday night.

Two jobless San Franciscans held another of the nine top tickets. They are Nick Daras and Joseph Butler. The latter has a wife and two children. They elected to try for the big prize, rejecting a $10,000 offer for half interest.

Salesmen Busy.

"Hot dog!" gasped James Short, of Portage, Pa., when informed he had won $150,000. "I've been busy trying to think what I'd do with the money ever since last Friday when I knew I had the horse, but I don't know yet. Everybody's been trying to sell me anything from soup to nuts."

Others in the top brackets were "Crane," of Quincy, Mass.; "North," of North Bend, Ohio; "West," of Philadelphia; Margaret Cunner, Brooklyn, and William Schriebern, Syracuse.

Daytona, which finished second to Dan Bulger, brought $75,000 each to P. Ryan, of Chicago, and Cella Johnson, Providence, R. I.

In all, Americans gained approximately $4,250,000, or half of the prize money dispensed under Irish Sweepstakes rules.

"Gets "Half Loaf."

Four Washingtonians who drew starters in the race found when the results were in that their horses were not in the first three.

"Half a loaf is better than none," said August Nikula, night pressman at the Government Printing Office, when informed his Irish Sweepstakes entry, Finalist, was among the "also rans."

His half loaf amounted to $7,000, for Nikula, who lives at 3808 Benton street northwest, was the only local ticket winner who sold an interest in his pastepoard. The other three will have to be satisfied with $2,965 each.

"I still think I'm pretty lucky," volunteered Mrs. Jewell Y. Goodman, a secretary in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, who turned down an offer of $4,200 for a half share in her ticket on Inchkeith. "I'm just as well satisfied that I didn't sell."

Seventy-eight-year-old Lemuel F. Lusby, retired grocer, of 723 East Capitol street, felt about the same way.

"Of course, I'm a little disappointed," he said. His horse was Inchkeith.

$624,113 'Conscience Fund' Accumulated by Treasury

$50,000 in Installments, 'Four Times the Amount I Stole Years Ago,' Sent in by One Contributor.

A sum of $624,113.70 credited on the Treasury ledgers to the "people's conscience" is proof a number of persons have already made this discovery.

The fund was started 145 years ago when a man who couldn't quiet "the still small voice" any other way, sent $5.00 to the Treasury. He wasn't specific why his conscience hurt him; said only he "couldn't sleep at night" and felt he owed the Government some money.

Since then many harrassed individuals have followed his example. For more than a century money has rolled in unsolicited from conscience stricken citizens who said they couldn't rest until they had paid their debt to Uncle Sam.

One man sent in a postage stamp as payment for an acorn he picked up while strolling over the Gettysburg battlefields. Another mailed in $50,000 in installments, designating the whole as "four times the amount I stole years ago."

"To His Majesty, the President:

"I am in a dreadful state of mind. I used two postage stamps which had been used before on letters. Now, dear President, will you please forgive me, and I promise never to do it again."

President Hoover got a "conscience note" from a soldier who took several pairs of gloves, some shirts and shoes at Camp Pike, Ark. "I was unsaved then," he explained. "But my conscience condemned me so I burned the stuff up. A little later I was converted at a revival meeting."

Once in a while a man who can't sleep isn't sure whether his conscience is the cause, or something else. For example, a "doubtful letter" came into the Treasury to this effect:

"Sir: In rendering income tax report a few years ago I may have claimed exemption erroneously, but I am not sure about this. However, I want to get my conscience cleared. P. S.—Can't you help us end the depression?"

Not all the letters to the conscience fund are from givers or doubters, however. Some are from persons seeking a loan. A 28-year-old New Yorker asked the Government to send him $2,525 by return mail to underwrite his career. But the money is never lent for any purpose. The "conscience fund"—every penny of it—goes into the general revenue of the Treasury.

Chest's Workers Urged Into Battle

Workers of the Community Chest yesterday afternoon were urged to "go forth to battle under a banner into the fabric of which there are woven the hopes of the poor, the needy and the afflicted," yesterday by Joseph P. Tumulty, chairman of the unit.

The occasion was the organization meeting of the unit at the Sulgrave Club.

"The slogan of the Community Chest contains a clarion call," Tumulty, secretary to President Woodrow Wilson, said, "and it is addressed to all that is noble in the human heart—that fine emotion of sympathy, which, when called into action, makes the atmosphere in which we live radiant and beautiful—an atmosphere of faith and cheer and godliness."

Troops Asked to Quell Philippine Leper Revolt

Manila, P. I. (Thursday), Oct. 29 (AP).—A call for soldiers to help avert disorders in Culion Island leper colony was received here today from Dr. Jose Raymundo, head of the colony.

Dr. Raymundo's message suggested the soldiers bring tear gas for use in an emergency.

He said threat of rebellion had risen among the 7,000 lepers confined in the colony because of failure of the Philippine National Assembly to free them from isolation.

Busby Berkeley Divorced.

Los Angeles, Oct. 28 (AP).—Merna Kennedy, screen actress, won a divorce today after she testified her husband, Busby Berkeley, screen dance director, cared more for his work than he did for his home.

Good Vision is a Valuable Asset

Guard it Jealously

TO many people vision is an unconscious act, yet to others not so fortunate it is an unusual drain on the nervous system.

To read a book or to study for long hours causes a number of unpleasant symptoms. As soon as the symptoms become evident you should take steps to have eyestrain corrected. Have your eyes examined by your oculist or eye physician and bring his prescription to us to be filled. Or call for an appointment with our optometrist for an examination. A moderate fee is charged for this service.

Virginia Water, Sewer Session To Open Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 28.—Delegates began arriving here today for the third annual two-day joint conference of the Virginia Section, American Water Works Association and Virginia Sewage Association, which opens tomorrow. Between 250 and 300 are expected to attend.

Exhibitors will attend from New York City, Waterbury, Conn.; East Orange, N. J.; Mertztown, Pa.; Providence, R. I.; Waterford, N. Y.; Wabash, Ind.; Bridgeport, Conn.; Philadelphia, Long Island City, Chicago, Bradford, Pa.; Troy, N. Y., and Richmond.

Preceding the conference there will be a golf tournament on the links of the Farmington Country Club, to be followed by a meeting of the executive committee at 12:30 p. m. E. F. Dugger, of Newport News, is chairman. Other members are M. C. Smith, Richmond; D. R. Taylor, Roanoke, and Hugh B. Rice, Lexington.

The first session will be opened at 2 p. m. by S. L. Williamson, Charlottesville, chairman of the Virginia section. A. B. McDaniel, consulting engineer of Washington, will read a paper on the underground dam at Harrisonburg, and the project will be further discussed by W. C. Meyers, city engineer of Harrisonburg.

The importance of public interest in local water works is the topic assigned W. W. Brush, of New York, editor of "Water Works Engineering," and Wilbur C. Hall, chairman of the Virginia commission on conservation and development, will discuss the conservation and development of water resources in Virginia.

The annual conference banquet will be held at 6:30 p. m. Randolph H. Perry, secretary of the local chamber of commerce, will be toastmaster. The guest speaker will be Harry E. Jordan, of Indianapolis, past president of the American Water Works Association. A dance will follow the banquet.

Water works problems in the Old Dominion will be reviewed Friday morning and reports of committees submitted and officers elected Friday afternoon.

Social Work Authority Will Speak at Y.W.C.A.

Dr. Edouard C. Lindemann, national social work authority, will speak tonight at a city-wide meeting of neighborhood councils at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest, at 6:30 o'clock. His topic will be "Functions of the Neighborhood Councils for Community Planning."

Dr. Lindemann will also speak at the third of a series of four lectures on "Building a Better Civilization" this morning at 11 o'clock in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building. The series is under the auspices of the committee on volunteer service of the Washington Council of Social Agencies.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, lumbago, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills. (Adv.)

Iowa Judge, Son Impersonate Convicts to Study Prison Life

Jurist and Law Student Who 'Served' 10-Day 'Stretch' in Penitentiary Differ in Report on Conditions and Morals Behind Walls.

By the Associated Press.

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 28.—A judge who spent ten self-imposed days in a convict's shoes and the son who shared his experience at the Fort Madison (Iowa) Penitentiary differed today in their impressions of prison life's seamy side.

They were District Judge Harry D. Landis, of Seward, Nebr., and Frank Landis, senior law student at the University of Nebraska. Under the alias "Dewitt" they were "dressed in" at Fort Madison last August 21 as prisoners convicted of fraudulent land deals. Only Warden Glenn Haynes knew their identity.

They agreed, in reports to the Iowa Control Board yesterday, that it was a valuable "social experiment," and in the case of the judge an excellent chance "to observe criminal behavior for use by myself on the bench." They also agreed that the Iowa penitentiary was well managed and efficient, and that the guards were "humane, fair, but firm."

Judge Landis found that the "cells are comfortable, and need not be depressing unless the inmate makes it so of his own violition." He said that "medical attention is quickly available and seems efficient," and that he found no evidence of the use of liquor or drugs.

"It is true," the son wrote, "that liquor is not in evidence but dope was used, made from makeshift ingredients found within the prison itself."

Young Landis declared in an interview at Lincoln, Nebr., that convicts talked mainly about sport events and future crimes. He said that he and his father were invited to participate in some of the crime plots after they left prison. The convicts, he said, frequently discussed plans for escape.

The Landises wore regular prison clothes and spent their first three days in the customary solitary confinement before Judge Landis went to work in the chair factory and his son was assigned to dig and load clay.

Rev. John H. Holmes Will Lecture Tonight

The Rev. John Haynes Holmes, of the Community Church of New York, will lecture before the National Temple Forum of the Washintgon Hebrew Congregation in the temple proper on Eighth street, at 8:15 o'clock tonight. His topic will be "Prophets of Doom: Are They Right or Wrong?"

The lecture is the first of seven to be given this season under the auspices of the National Temple Forum. Dr. Holmes is the author of numerous books, not only on religion but poetry and religion generally. He is an authority on international relations.

British Freighter Sends Call for Aid

New York, Oct. 28 (AP).—Mackay Radio reported tonight receipt of a message from the steamship Afghanistan advising it was drifting in heavy gales and that its steering gear had been carried away.

The position she reported placed the British freighter in midatlantic about 950 miles west of the west coast of Scotland.

The Afghanistan was reported to have left Tynemouth, England, on October 15. Lloyd's register listed her as a freighter of 5,516 tons. Her owner is the Hindustan Steamshipping Co. of London.

The number of crew or passengers aboard the freighter was not immediately learned.

A. F. L. Council Offers Seattle Strike Plan

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, disclosed yesterday that the Federation's executive council had recommended reinstatement of all strikers as a part of its proposal for settlement of the American Newspaper Guild strike against the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

The proposal also called for removal of the paper from the Seattle Central Labor body's "unfair list," immediate resumption of publication, and negotiations on wages and working conditions of editorial workers, conducted by the management and a committee from the central labor body.

Few Hours Left To Enter Post's Ballot Contest

Midnight Friday Deadline For Entries In $1,000 Presidential Poll.

Less than 48 hours remain before the deadline in The Washington Post's 1936 Presidential Poll Contest—midnight, Friday, October 30.

All entries must be in the hands of the Contest Editor, or in the mails postmarked before the deadline day and hour, in order to qualify for 34 cash awards totaling $1,000.

Clip and fill in the Poll Prediction Form printed on this page. Then write a letter of not more than 250 words, explaining how you arrived at your prediction on the outcome of the election. Mail both the Prediction Form and your letter to The Contest Editor, Washington Post, Washington, D. C.

Purpose: To encourage interest and study on the part of the public in methods of measuring public opinion on important national issues.

Requirements: Each contestant must write a letter of 250 words or less, describing his, or her, method and material used, between now and October 30, in arriving at predictions on:

1. The winner of the Presidential election. 2. The States carried by the winning candidate. Contest letters, on the merits of which prizes will be awarded, must be accompanied by the contestant's predictions, indicated on the Presidential Poll Prediction Form printed on this page, or on a facsimile of that form drawn by the contestant. (Letters will not be judged on the basis of literary merit—but, rather, on the clearness, conciseness and simplicity of the contestant's explanation of the method and the material used in arriving at his, or her, predictions. The letter of a 15-year-old schoolboy or girl — which tells, briefly and clearly, how he, or she, arrived at conclusions as to which candidate would win and which States he would carry — will be judged on an equal basis with that of a political expert.)

Rules: 1. It is not necessary that contestants be subscribers to The Washington Post. (Copies of America Speaks polls, special articles on election trends in various parts of the country and other similar material of assistance to the contestant may be obtained at The Washington Post Building at The Post library, or in copies of The Post on file at the various public libraries.)

2. All contest entries must be in by midnight, Friday, October 30, 1936. (All contest letters accompanied by Presidential Poll Prediction Forms, must be received at The Washington Post Building, E street at Pennsylvania avenue, Washington, D. C., by that time, or in mailed envelopes postmarked previous to that time.)

3. All persons are eligible to enter the contest, with the exception of employes of The Washington Post and employes of the American Institute of Public Opinion.

4. Each contestant may submit only one entry.

5. The Washington Post will be the sole judge in awarding the 34 cash prizes, totaling $1,000.

6. Winners will be announced as soon as possible after official results of the election are known and the winners of first, second, third and fourth prizes must call in person at The Washington Post to receive their awards. Checks will be mailed to the other 30 winners.

Prizes: First, $500; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50; fifth prize to thirty-fourth prize, $5 each.

Gangland Is Blamed In Slaying in Chicago

Chicago, Oct. 28 (AP).—Two masked gunmen early today entered a tavern in suburban Niles and shot to death its manager, Adolph Anzone, 32, in what police said was a gangland execution.

They fired two charges from a sawed-off shotgun into Anzone as he attempted to hide behind the bar.

Text of Roosevelt's Address

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 28.—Following is the text of the speech President Roosevelt delivered at Roosevelt Park today:

I have just come from the ceremonies at the Statue of Liberty. I spoke there of the steady stream of human resources which the old world poured on our shores and out of which our American civilization has been built.

Many of the people who came past the Statue of Liberty settled in this section of New York City. Here they wove into the pattern of American life some of the color and the richness of the cultures from which they came. Here they joined in that great process out of which we have welded an American citizenship.

We gave them freedom. I am proud—America is proud—of what they have given to us.

They have never been—they are not now—half-hearted Americans. In Americanization classes and at night schools they have burned the midnight oil in order to be worthy of their new allegiance.

They were not satisfied merely to find here the realization of the material hopes which had guided them from their native land. They were not satisfied merely to build a material home for themselves and their families.

They were intent also upon building a place for themselves in the ideals of America. They sought an assurance of permanency in the new land for themselves and their children based upon active participation in its civilization and culture.

Analyzes Ideals of Liberty.

Those who have come here of late understand and appreciate our free institutions and our free opportunity, as well as those who have been here for many generations. The great majority of the new and the old do not confuse the word "liberty" with the word "license." They appreciate that the American standard of freedom does not include the right to do things to hurt their neighbors. All of us—old-comers and newcomers—agree that for the speculator to gamble with and lose the savings of the clients of his bank is just as contrary to American ideals of liberty as it is for the poor man to upset the peddler's cart and steal his wares. To our newer Americans America is a great discovery. They who have never been so free before rejoice in our freedom. Our liberty is warmed by the fire of their devotion.

I am inclined to think that in some cases the newer citizens have discharged their obligations to us better than we have discharged our obligations to them. For example, their coming helped to intensify the housing problem in many of our great cities. We have not yet worked out an adequate answer to that problem.

As a matter of fact, we have, for too long, neglected the housing problem for all our lower-income groups. We have spent large sums of money on parks, on highways, on bridges, on museums and for other projects of civic betterment. For the most part, that was money well spent. But we have not yet begun adequately to spend money in order to help the families in the overcrowded sections of our cities to live as American citizens have a right to live.

You and I will not be content until city, State and Federal governments join with private capital in helping every American family to live that way.

We need action to get better city housing. Senator Wagner and I had hoped for a new law at the last session of the Congress. We who believe in better housing have not been defeated. I am confident that the next Congress will start us on our way with a sound housing policy. We shall certainly get it if on November third you vote to send to Washington the kind of Government which I am confident you want—a Government which will continue to work for security of the home, for security of jobs, for security of savings, and for better homes in every part of the Nation.

260th Victim Beheaded By 'Monsieur de Paris'

Caen, France, Oct. 28 (AP).—"Monsieur de Paris," France's aged, gray-bearded executioner, claimed his 260th victim at dawn today.

Calmly, spurning the traditional rum and cigarette of the condemned, Andre Martin went to his death on the guillotine for the murder of a jeweler and his wife a year ago. He was the fourteenth Martin executed by "Monsieur de Paris," the 68-year-old Anatole Diebler, hereditary executioner of the Third Republic.

OTARD
The only Cognac bottled at the Chateau de Cognac

Ode to Otard by Ogden nash

O IS FOR OTTO
Everybody laughed at Otto,
Always absolutely blotto.
Buying nameless drinks in haste,
He gulped them down to kill the taste.
He thus missed half the fun in life,
And what is more, annoyed his wife.
"I do not love you when you're blotto,"
Said his wife. "Try Otard, Otto".
Otto did, and thanks to her
He's now a temperate connoisseur.

Unique distinction for a great Brandy!
The grapes of the tiny Cognac region yield a rich and distinctive brandy. And of these, only OTARD is bottled at the historic Chateau de Cognac. This distinction is unique as the flavor and aroma of OTARD itself!
OTARD ★★★ Cognac—delicious with soda or straight. It costs no more!

The Cost Doesn't Count.

In the current issue of Work, the propagandist monthly publication of the local WPA, Rexford Tugwell, as Resettlement administrator, presents a very pleasing outline of the modern community now taking shape at Berwyn Heights. At a cost which has been roughly estimated at some $7,000,000 the Resettlement Administration is building 1,000 homes with a community center and commercial area designed especially to serve the town. Greenbelt is one of three RA experiments intended to establish a "yardstick for housing."

Mr. Tugwell has no difficulty whatever in convincing his readers that Greenbelt will be a pleasant place to live. Surrounded by woodland and the "peace of the countryside," it will nevertheless have all the advantages of an urban community. Recreational facilities include a theater, a community center and a 24-acre lake with bathing and boating facilities. Garages are grouped together, and the houses are built in rows containing two to eight dwellings. Every unit will open on an attractive garden. Moreover, the homes are being insulated and are otherwise provided with the most modern conveniences.

The prospective delights of living at Greenbelt have already produced 5,000 letters from those who regard themselves as potential residents, even though the community is still in the construction stage. But slum and alley dwellers need not apply. Mr. Tugwell writes that the favored tenants will be chosen "on the basis of the family's need for good housing at a low rent, and its record of financial responsibility." The choice will be restricted to those families "having incomes of from $1,200 to $2,000 yearly."

In other words, Greenbelt, however charming and well planned, is in no sense a slum elimination project. It is designed, as Mr. Tugwell points out, to meet "the needs of the motor age" and to set standards in suburban planning which can be developed elsewhere at moderate costs for families in the middle economic group. Whether an unsubsidized imitation can hope to provide similar facilities for those with incomes ranging from $23 to $40 a week is, of course, exceedingly dubious. Certainly the project has no connection whatsoever with the rehousing of slum dwellers.

The usefulness of a practical exhibit in the garden city field is readily apparent. But the fundamental question, which Mr. Tugwell studiously avoids, is that of cost. The Greenbelt houses can be made available to families in the $1,000-$2,000 class only if the Government agrees to amortization of its loan over a period of 60 years at 3 per cent interest. Such an arrangement makes it silly to talk of the experiment as a yardstick for private enterprise.

When the RA settles down to consideration of the elementary factors that will determine the significance of its demonstration it may decide to eliminate all subsidies in the operation of Greenbelt. That does not seem to be contemplated at present. This model community is going forward on the pleasant assumption that costs, unmentioned in Mr. Tugwell's bright prospectus, are of no importance in a demonstration project.

Smeared With Whitewash.

The refusal of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee to take immediate action on well-attested charges that WPA workers in Pennsylvania are being subjected to political coercion is not likely to help Mr. Roosevelt.

The contention will be made by Republicans, and it should be a vote-winning contention, that the committee is evading its obligations and has proved itself an Administration instrument. Senator Lonergan and his colleagues cannot possibly be really satisfied with the alleged clearance of the WPA by investigations which from the outset have been partial, perfunctory and partisan.

From a nonpolitical viewpoint, however, the action or inaction of the Lonergan committee in this matter is immaterial. Whether or not it is now publicly demonstrated that WPA workers in Pennsylvania and other States have been forced to make political contributions under threat of being taken off the pay roll is not the real issue. The essential fact is that the WPA, as it is organized and functions, by its very nature provides the party in power with a political tool which it is under constant and irresistible temptation to utilize.

Any real investigation of the charges which the Lonergan committee has now shamefacedly put on the shelf until after the election would of necessity require a throughgoing inquiry into the entire character and philosophy of the WPA. It is not really surprising that the committee has fought shy of opening this Pandora's box at this moment. But sooner or later, whatever the outcome of the election may be, the unsavory task must be undertaken.

Meantime thoughtful voters will note that the committee, by refusing to grant public hearings on the subject, has confirmed suspicions too well-founded to be hushed up by any governmental pressure.

The Business Outlook.

Resumption by the United States Steel Corporation of full dividend payments on its preferred stock emphasizes the widespread character of the business upturn, confined for a long time to nondurable consumption lines. The extent of the general recovery is shown by the seasonally adjusted industrial-production index of the Federal Reserve Board. This rose in September to 109 per cent of the base period, 1923-25, or less than 10 per cent below the 1929 level.

Many industries are now operating on a scale to equal or exceed their 1929 production records. Improvement and extension of plant capacity have become imperative after years of neglect and undermaintenance. As a result of increased equipment buying, the durable goods industries are at last beginning to participate more fully in the benefits of a business revival which was beginning to be perceptible in the summer of 1932.

The rapid progress made in recent months, despite the political distractions of a Presidential election and the uncertainties facing business in the form of vexatious regulatory and taxation experiments, is a sign of the Nation's latent economic strength. It shows the driving power of the forces at work to bring recuperation after periods of depression.

The bogey of excess capacity is being laid, but we still have millions of unemployed who can find no jobs in industries working at full time. Factory employment is conspicuously failing to keep pace with the rise in productive activity. This disparity indicates that either because of increased managerial efficiency, or through introduction of labor-saving devices, productive output per worker has greatly increased in recent years.

The unsolved unemployment problem constitutes one disturbing aspect of the recovery picture. Another closely related cause of disquiet lies in the knowledge that the purchasing power of millions of Americans is being provided by public spending which is piling up budgetary deficits. Until a large proportion of these unemployed are reabsorbed by private industry, or their numbers reduced to the point where they can be supported within the limits of a balanced budget, rejoicing over the recovery already achieved will be tempered by doubts as to the permanency of the gains.

That such misgivings are strongly imbedded in the public consciousness is confirmed by the reluctance of businessmen to risk their capital in new enterprises. Disregarding the large volume of refunding issues, total new capital issues are still extremely small compared with the figures for predepression years. For the first nine months of 1936, for instance, new capital issues are estimated to have amounted to approximately $1,370,000,000, as contrasted with an annual average of $5,785,000,000 for the years from 1919 to 1929.

A solidly based recovery movement must be able to advance by virtue of its own momentum, without the artificial stimulus of huge uncovered governmental outlays. And it must proceed until jobs can be provided for all but a small minority of the employable population. The next stage in our march toward prosperity, therefore, calls for an expansion of existing industries and development of new ones to satisfy wants as yet unknown.

That is the way in which jobs have always been created heretofore for workers displaced by the improved technique of a progressive machine age. It still seems to be the only feasible remedy for unemployment which would not give rise to new and equally difficult problems. We are at the beginning of the last stretch of the uphill road leading toward full recovery. But full achievement will be impossible unless the next Administration follows policies that restore complete confidence in the stability of the currency.

District Voters.

There is ground for local satisfaction in the prospect that more than 106,000 residents of the disfranchised District will cast ballots in next Tuesday's election. The unusual volume of mail ballots reflects the keen interest in this year's Presidential contest as well as improvement of the system of absentee voting.

Balloting by mail is now an established practice. Many thousands of voters who would otherwise be disfranchised now make a regular habit of sending their ballots to the counties in which they are registered. No doubt the largest number of such votes is mailed out from Washington, but travelers and temporary residents in all parts of the country find the system equally useful.

Nine States have not yet made provision for absentee voting, and some of the laws already in operation could well be modified in the interest of simplicity. It is especially strange that such States as Maryland, Pennsylvania and New Jersey still deny the franchise to anyone who may be absent from his home town on election day. The display of interest on the part of absentee voters this year should awaken delinquent legislatures to a realization of the fact that their electoral machinery is, to that extent, archaic.

Of course, it should not be necessary for citizens living permanently in Washington to mail a ballot for President and Vice President to the State of their origin. Nor should that franchise be denied to the many thousands here who have no chance whatever to vote elsewhere, either by mail or in person.

Serious difficulties have been encountered in every plan to elect local officials in the District or to give the Capital City voting representation in Congress. But fewer obstacles exist to prevent local citizens from voting for Presidential candidates. In a democracy with traditions extending back for 150 years the political genius should certainly be sufficient to end this anomaly of denying citizens of the Capital City a vote for the Chief Executive to whom their local government is responsible.

While awaiting that solution, however, no effort should be spared to extend the franchise to those who still maintain residences in the States.

Landon's Message To Labor.

Gov. Landon's speech at Newark yesterday finally demonstrates that on the question of labor's right to organize there is nothing to choose between the positions of the two major candidates. All assertion that there is equivocation on this point in the Republican platform is contradicted by the candidate's flat statement that "labor has the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of its own choosing without interference by employers."

From the beginning of the campaign it has been obvious to all fair-minded people that this is Mr. Landon's position on the subject. But he has done well to state it in language which the most captious can not even pretend to misunderstand. His statement yesterday was a shrewd political stroke, knocking the foundations from under the effort of certain labor leaders to capitalize for themselves in this election. But it was also an indication of the Republican nominee's essentially liberal attitude, and his willingness to assume a clear-cut position on issues which some of his supporters would undoubtedly like to soft-pedal.

Gov. Landon's observations on the dangers involved in any definite political orientation by labor as a class were also of the highest importance. The development of a political labor party in this country, however attractive it might seem from certain aspects at first glance, would undoubtedly spell an end to the effort to keep the United States a classless democracy. Only if it can be argued that there is one political party representing employers as such is it logical to advocate a separate labor party. Mr. Landon's speech at Newark goes far to show that arguments based on this assumption are without substance.

The Republican nominee was not so happy in his strictures on the shortcomings of the present social security program. Those shortcomings are undoubtedly serious and a number of the points made by Mr. Landon in the matter are well taken. But any argument which attacks the principle of employe contribution in social insurance is a two-edged sword. It is not merely that employe contributions spread the costs and stimulate constructive worker interest in social insurance programs. Most important is the fact that the contributory principle more than anything else separates social insurance from an outright and demoralizing dole program for the unemployed, indigent aged and other industrial casualties.

Similarly, it is evident that Mr. Landon has not yet really studied the history of unemployment insurance when he asserts that "all past experience abroad" shows that "practically every plan has broken down after a few months in the face of a depression of any duration."

The British system of unemployment insurance, based on tripartite contributions from employer, employe and the State, temporarily degenerated into something akin to a dole during the worst of the depression period. With the return of relative prosperity in Great Britain the unemployment insurance system there has long since been completely re-established.

It can, indeed, be argued from British experience that temporary removal of restrictions on benefit payments demonstrated a desirable flexibility rather than any fundamental shortcoming in this scientific form of relief.

An old-timer is one who can remember when the family doctor consulted a half-pound watch and counted the patient's pulse for a full minute.

The purchase of prosperity for the country by the Government may or may not be a sound investment. That depends entirely upon whether or not it lasts long enough to become self-liquidating.

"A hobby will keep you from going crazy," asserts a psychiatrist. And as to those who have to listen to you talk about your hobby, we suppose it's up to them to maintain their sanity as best they can.

What a world! About time you finish drawing up a strict budget and get all lined up to save some money, your neighbor hauls off and buys a new automobile.

No wonder most of us stay broke all the time. There are so few ways of earning money and so many ways to spend it.

Letters to the Editor

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

The War Is Over.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just read the letter sent you by the Northerner who calls himself "A Yankee." He (or she) states that he is in a quandary as to why a reviewer of current literature for The Washington Post should commend a book such as the current best-seller, "Gone With the Wind."

On behalf of The Post reviewer and the author of "Gone With the Wind," Margaret Mitchell, I will attempt to relieve "A Yankee" from his quandary. In the first place, The Post reviewer is apparently broad-minded enough to realize that the War Between the States has been over these many years.

I am a Georgian, and will always think of myself as a Southerner, but I bear no malice toward any Northerner. There was a time when even the strains of "Marching Through Georgia" made my blood boil, but not so today. Today I realize that the Yankees are no longer Yankees, but Americans. Therefore, doesn't that give us something in common? It certainly gives us enough in common that we of both the North and South can read an enjoyable novel without flying off the handle because the novel happens to contain local color of one section or another. I can't help believing that individuals such as "A Yankee" do more harm toward the good will between the North and South than all the sectional literature ever written.

Such things as Miss Mitchell states in her novel were no doubt true. Sherman's men all but destroyed my great-grandfather's plantation on the Yankee general's great campaign from Atlanta to the sea, and no doubt worse things were done but those things happened a good many years ago. We Southerners as a whole are willing to let bygones be bygones and let's hope the Northerners feel the same way, but please, when a Southern writer turns out an excellent novel, give her credit. Take it for what it's worth, but don't let it be a bone of contention between Americans of one section and Americans of another section, for after all, we are one now.

Bishop Cannon And Al.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congratulations, I hope, are in order to Bishop Cannon. I note that he is joining our brave 100 per cent Americans, Alfred E. Smith, Bainbridge Colby, et al. The state of communism in which this country now finds itself undoubtedly awakened Bishop Cannon and had he realized that all Christianity was at stake in 1928 as he does now in 1936, his only objection to Alfred E. Smith and his charming wife would have been on account of the prohibition question.

But will some one in the name of Heaven explain Joseph Tumulty's speech made in Connecticut in behalf of the present Administration. The persecutors of Alfred E. Smith through the South are the supporters of Franklin D. Roosevelt, and this is more perplexing when one looks around from most any angle and beholds liquor signs and signs of liquor.

This is the time to test true Americanism. A gift from the poor is true charity, because it hurts the giver; so too, will an honest contribution to Alf M. Landon if Franklin D. Roosevelt is re-elected.

Landon On Foreign Policy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to congratulate The Post on its editorial this morning, captioned "A Negative Program." The editorial is an able analysis of Gov. Landon's address on foreign affairs. With conditions in Europe what they are today it is absolutely essential that our Chief Executive be a man wise in the administration of such affairs. We have such a man in President Roosevelt, ably assisted by Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

With respect to Gov. Landon's outlook on the current world situation, the editorial states that "it cannot possibly be regarded as indicating a constructive or statesmanlike attitude in a great crisis of world history."

To this observer the same criticism may be made to most of Gov. Landon's proposals to remedy present ills and his objections to New Deal policies. Gov. Landon, unfortunately for himself, has resorted to many devices in an attempt to secure popular acclaim, and has thereby involved himself in a maze of contradictions that must destroy him.

Evolution In Government.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The fundamental principles which have proven the greatest bulwark to our Government are the inalienable rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Such ideals are requisite to the promulgation of a free and enlightened people. They are embedded deeply within our heritage and any attempt at their confiscation would be detrimental to our welfare. Democratic doctrines and beliefs have long been acknowledged and accepted by governments in the past. In the democratic city states, states of old Greece and in our own hemisphere as far back as the Toltec and Mayan civilizations, we have evidence of the advancements made along democratic lines. The power of sovereignty is the life blood of organized government, but it can only serve the greatest number best when exercised by the citizenry themselves. Tyranny, on the other hand, is a dangerous affront to democracy, and whether it exists through a political, social or economic oligarchy the fact remains that it can still be tyranny.

We have witnessed time and again the inconsistency and futility of philosophies destined to curb the expressions of democracy (free speech, free press, and the right of peaceful assemblage) and we have learned through experience that this can only prove reactionary to and degenerative of progress and the freedom of individual enterprise. For a present day comparison let us analyze the situation in England as contrasted with any other state on the Continent. In the former we find a stable conservative body-politic resting securely upon her time honored tradition. The Magna Charta, the Bill of Rights, the habeas corpus act and the common law have maintained stability and character in the English government and have been her guiding principles since the thirteenth century. English law has changed, yes, but it has evolved cautiously from one category to another in order to meet as it were the social and economic needs of the time. The machinery of government, however, has remained intact and is basically the same today as it was after the creation of Parliament in 1265.

It would be superfluous to rehearse the conflict and turmoil inflicted in the other states by the advent of new theories and impractical solutions. Not only have these factors proven retrogressive, but they have been the tools of demagogues and political puppets. Conditions such as these cannot permeate long the annals of time. People will realize their fruitlessness and when they do an upheaval much more devastating and destructive will weave its way into the discontented fabric of their daily life.

It is for this reason that I have come to the conclusion that the best way to fulfill our desires is through a progressive but steady philosophy in government.

BENJAMIN R. STICKNEY, JR.

The G. A. R. Parade.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of the greatest blunders that President Roosevelt has ever made was his failure to review the parade of the veterans of the Civil War last month.

These faltering few nonagenarians came to Washington from all parts of the country. Many of them made this journey at great sacrifice. They came to what was to most their last encampment. The high-light of this was to be reviewed by their commander in chief.

Up the Avenue they came, the straggling few, trying to carry the flags and to march as gaily, as jauntily, as they might have marched 70 years ago. On to the goal—the reviewing stand by the front gate of the White House and there was no President, there was no Vice President, there were no members of the President's family. Roosevelt had left for the week-end in Hyde Park and did not try to get back for the Wednesday of the parade. Mrs. Roosevelt was ill with a cold, yet the day was warm and the grand stand only a few steps from her door. She could have made an effort.

So the old men marched in their last parade and were disappointed, but there were so few of them they would not count politically.

A Career System.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is gratifying to note the efforts of the President's committee on administrative management to establish a career system in the Federal departments as portrayed in your editorial "A Government Career System." But this cannot be superimposed upon the existing civil service system without some fundamental changes.

We must first construct a secure foundation upon which to erect our civil service structure.

For each appointment the three highest eligibles are now certified to the head of the department. This method permits favoritism and discrimination and the use of congressional influence in the selection of the appointed which thwarts the ideals of a merit system at its incipiency. Unless favoritism is eliminated at the start it will continue to influence the advancement of the appointed throughout his governmental career and thus defeat the true intent of the merit system.

As an additional protection against favoritism and discrimination only the fingerprint should be used as a means of identification. This proposed method is used in England, also by the Mayor's office in New York City and elsewhere.

Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Board of Public Welfare voted, at its last meeting, unanimously to thank The Post for the excellent series of articles on the District Training School at Laurel which you printed several weeks ago.

The board feels that these articles showed a fine comprehension of the problems of the care of the feeble-minded and of the problems of this institution of which so little, in general, is known; that the articles were admirably written and conspicuously displayed; and that they constituted the best piece of interpretation that Washington has ever seen of the work of this institution which so much needs public understanding and community support.

An Old Saw.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While many voters are doubtless endeavoring to reconcile the promises now being made as a bid for their votes with the candidate's record, it would be well to contemplate as applicable in pointing the way to wisdom an old saw of several generations of usefulness: "If you deceive me the first time it is your fault; if you do so the second time it is mine."

Gammon And Spinach.

PHRASES live and then die. I have been asking some of my friends if they remember "Gammon and Spinach" and the reply of most of them has been, "I knew Spinach—worse luck!—but I have never met Gammon." Which is absurd. They have always known Gammon, though perhaps under one of his numerous aliases; and they prove it as they talk.

It is, as a matter of fact, quite impossible to avoid meeting Gammon, for he is to be found in all walks of life and in all corners; on the highway of progress, where the go-getters speed, and on the sidewalks of that highway, where the philanderers meander; on a throne, where a tyrant pontificates with dogmatic assertiveness, and in an easy chair, where a lazy philosopher voices his views with a mischievous latescence.

Literature knows him. He parades solemnly through the Baconian controversy and is discussed with some sapience by Anthony Rowley in his well-known history of the frog that went a-wooing. He dominates drama. (His stage name is Hokum.) He is largely responsible for the cynicisms of the sporting fraternity, since he plays offside with the pigskin and allows the golfer to slice. He encourages the rash gourmand to meet a rasher; puts business on the hog, and enables the politician to prove that the way to have plenty is to reduce the supply. That's Gammon.

Gammon, in short, is both plain humbug and a flitch of bacon. Gammon and Spinach was once as popular a dish as Ham and Cabbage, to which it bore affinity; and "Gammon and Spinach" as a phrase was once just as common as the "That's the bunk" of a later day.

* * *

All of which is preface to the fact that when the Gourmet Society recently met in New York to say goodby to spinach, its president, J. George Frederick, declared that the modest potherb was "the most outrageous food imposition of the century." But that 17 members of the organization, very evidently considering his remarks gammon, took occasion during the three-hour luncheon, to order second helpings of the educated relative of the pigweed (another member of the celebrated Goosefoot family), has real significance.

There is nothing really surprising about this New York meeting. The gourmets are laboring under a misapprehension. They think they are revolting against spinach; but what they are really rebelling against is gammon.

Spinach has always been a food; it didn't become a pest until it became a cult; and it didn't become a cult until the ad writers gave us, as it were, a Texas steer. There were thousands of acres of spinach in Texas and something had to be done about it or tons of feed would go to waste. So something was done about it. Up to that time the average man could take his spinach or let it alone; but when he saw in print day after day that it was good for everything that ailed him, that it contained not only vitamins A, E, I, O and U, but sometimes W and Y, he began to feel that that day was not well spent that did not have its full allowance of spinach.

* * *

Well, you know how a man is. He was not satisfied merely to dose himself; he had to dose his family, too. His wife fell for the fad at once. She hadn't very much more sense than he had himself. But the children!—the poor children—you couldn't fool them! Spinach, spinach, spinach! They would have been willing to stand a little of it as food, but as a duty it was not to be endured. And the children rebelled and the paragraphers heard of it, and the cartoonists, and the editorial writers, and by and by it got around to the head-of-the-family-spinach-eater and he began to wonder if he wasn't making a bally ass of himself.

Please don't misunderstand me. I am passionately fond of spinach and at least three of my great-grandchildren wake up in the night and cry for it. That's because in our family spinach has never been a duty; rather, it has been the reward of virtue. As a consequence the children would rather have a plate of spinach than an ice cream cone.

And, oh, how they love gammon! I sometimes think that they eventually will get a job on the Ship of State as cooks or something.

One hears a lot about the Ship of State in the exciting days before election when the politicians radiate confidence and conceal qualms. From radio accounts I gather that she carries full sail and is tossed hither and thither by the winds of public opinion; that she is equipped with modern machinery; that her fuel is industry; that her power is business; her chart and steering gear, the laws; her gyroscope, the Constitution; her cargo, 120,000,000 odd men, women and children, and her designated destination a Glorious Future. My personal opinion is that she carries a cargo of mixed metaphors and some gammon, and that when she lists to starboard or to port it is due less to the shifting of the cargo than, what with the various economic currents, to the inclinations of the pilot, veering to the right or to the left.

* * *

Just as an afterthought I put the matter up to an adolescent, a bright lad who knows everything and makes a bluff at everything else.

"Ever run across Gammon and Spinach, Johnny?" I asked.

British Press Puzzle.

THE CONDUCT of the British press in the Simpson divorce case has been a bit of a puzzle, because our friends the British press are known to have a robust appetite for scandal and snappy copy affecting Americans, and this one would seem to have been just their dish.

British editors are partial to American news, but they specialize in items about Hollywood, divorces, kidnapings, race riots and gang massacres. Last year about this time they had a field day with the story of the execution of our "Dutch" Schultz and some of his boys by some of their friends. Later they enjoyed themselves thoroughly for many a day with the story of the flight of Col. Lindbergh to escape a repetition of the foul ambuscade in which a photographer sniped a picture of his son, Jon.

In fact, some of the British papers which thanked God they were British and conducted in good taste, with a gentleman's regard for a gentleman's privacy, went so far as to reproduce to the extent of half a page the very picture which had been sniped by the American photographer and to snipe some pictures of their own showing the arrival of the Colonel and his baby in the land where the gentleman's privacy is scrupulously respected. They did this only by way of proving that he had actually been driven out by an unscrupulous press and actually had arrived in England.

THAT MUCH I know from personal observation, and I am bold enough to assume that the British editors neglected no morsel of the Mary Astor diary story last summer, because that would be the kind of American story they would most enjoy.

I recall that last winter in Paris Mr. Carl Ackerman, the dean of journalism at Columbia University, going through Paris on a trip around the world, sounded a note of complaint over the type of news which was selected in the British countries to report how life was going in America. Many momentous social and political issues were up in the American news at the time, but wherever he stopped in the British ports, on which the sun never sets, the American news in the papers consisted of crime, scandal and sensational divorce.

But every country to its own taste, and if that is the British taste never let it be said that the American routine is unequal to the requirements of their editors.

To Americans, however, the curious thing is that the most sensational divorce story in, just for a figure, a hundred years, occurring on their own home grounds and involving a close friend of His Majesty their King, has made absolutely no appeal to the news sense of the British press.

It would be wrong to say that it has not appealed to the interest of the British public, for the cables report that American papers carrying the Simpson case were quickly bought up on arriving in London. That would be understandable, because there is no public in the world with a stronger appetite for such matter than the British, as anyone knows who worked in London before the constant flow of foul and obscene verbatim divorce testimony made it necessary to adopt restrictive laws.

• • • •

IF YOU NEVER saw the divorce pieces in an English Sunday paper before the law was amended as a sanitary measure you can not have any notion what filth is. But they loved it and those papers sold in tremendous figures, and there again we come to the mystery of the extreme reticence of the British editors in the Simpson case.

Our cables from England report that the British editors have discovered in the story no news value whatever, notwithstanding the fact that His Majesty the King has been seen much oftener with the lady than with her husband, and the further fact that the husband, is a brother officer of the King in the Guards. By Gad, sir, you know—brother officers and that sort of thing! Let it be hoped that nobody on the British side will now say that our interest in this affair is unwarranted and in itself a scandal. Goodness knows they have had plenty of fun with our little embarrassments, and this one is rich enough to even things up.

And let us not, for the time being, say anything about the integrity, independence and respectability of the free press of Great Britain which has suppressed one of the most important news stories in the history of journalism, contrary to its charter, and the sometimes difficult duty which freedom of the press imposes.

American Biography

By William Lyon Phelps

Troye to Wentworth.

This vast undertaking is nearing completion. The latest volume, Volume Nineteen, covers the names from Troye to Wentworth.

"The Dictionary of American Biography" (published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York) and to be found among the indispensable reference books in every public library, is one of the most useful books in the world. I could not keep house without it. If you want to know all that is known about any American man or woman who in his lifetime achieved either fame or notoriety or drew attention for any reason, in these volumes you will find a trustworthy account of his life and career, with a list of books where you can follow him up, if you wish. Only the dead are adimtted to its pages; and if any obscure person is eating his heart out in anguish because he cannot attract public attention, let him remember that Stevenson said it is better to be a fool than to be dead.

• • • • •

It is interesting to see the number of columns of print assigned to each person—sure indication of what the editors think today of his importance. In this nineteenth volume, containing persons from Troye to Wentworth, if I ask you who is the most distinguished person in this section of the alphabet, you should be able to give instantly the correct answer—George Washington. He has 36 columns in his biography; so that it is like reading a full-length life of the man.

But there are other Presidents of the United States of America in this end of the alphabet. John Tyler gets seven columns. He was the first of our Vice Presidents to reach the highest office without being elected to it. Then there is Martin Van Buren, who gets ten and a half columns. Taylor and Taft were in the preceding volume and Woodrow Wilson will be in the next.

• • • • •

Just look at these names, all of whom are in this volume, and see how many you instantly recognize: Trudeau, two John Trumbulls, W. J. Tucker, Tulane, F. J. Turner (there are 17 Turners), Tweed Twichell, Uncas, O. W. Underwood, Vallandingham, Van Amringe, the Vanderbilts, Van Dyke, Vardaman, Vassar, Veblen, Verrill, Very, Vest, Villard, J. H. Vincent, Voohees, Wagner, Waite (there are 32 Walkers), Lew Wallace, L. Wallack, T. M. Waller, Blanche Walsh, Thomas J. Walsh, Wanamaker (there are 33 Wards), (there are 15 Warners), Joseph Warren (there are 22 Warrens), B. Washington (there are 14 Watsons, H. Watterson, F. Wayland, A. Wayne, J. B. Weaver (there are 10 Webbs), N. Webster, T. Weed, Weems, Weir, W. H. Welch, G. Welles, H. Wells, B. Wendell, Wentworth.

The Arms Race

League Assembly Modestly Proposes Publicity On Defense Costs As Entering Wedge For New Disarmament Move.

By Bertram Pickard,
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Geneva.

ONE OF the last acts of the seventeenth session of the League of Nations Assembly was to declare that "the question of the reduction and limitation of armaments must remain on the Agenda of the League of Nations as an international political problem."

Accordingly the League Council has instructed its president to arrange that, before the end of the year, the date shall be fixed for the next meeting of the steering committee of the Disarmament Conference.

The Disarmament Conference, comprising as it does several important states not members of the League (e. g., the United States and Japan), will of course decide its own program. But in view of the very considerable progress that had been made in the conference on technical matters there is little doubt that the steering committee, when it meets, will favor the suggestion incorporated in the Assembly's report.

It is proposed "that a start should be made with the draft Convention on Publicity of National Defense Expenditure;" it being noted that "there is a technically complete plan which can be adopted and applied as soon as the decisions of the competent authorities have been taken."

At first sight the idea of dealing only with publicity of national defense expenditure may appear so ludicrously insufficient as to warrant being laughed out of court.

Admittedly it is an extremely modest slice of the general task of limiting and reducing armaments which the Disarmament Conference set itself in 1932. Its significance, as a starting point, however, will dawn on anyone who thinks about the problem of regulating armaments by international agreement.

ASSUMING it to be feasible to shift armaments from the plane of complete national freedom to that of some form of international agreement and supervision, it is obvious that the first problem to be encountered is that of compiling adequate and comparable data concerning national armaments. The drafters of the Covenant foresaw this vital need.

In a field where secrecy has always been, and still is, a characteristic, no one is naive enough to suppose that League members have fulfilled, both in letter and spirit, the obligation to effect such interchange of information. But, though opinions differ as to how "full" and "frank" the interchange has been, there is no difference of opinion as to the great utility of the information which in fact has been regularly pooled, not only by League members but by nonmember states as well. This data has been published, year by year since 1924, by the disarmament section of the League secretariat in a series of Armaments Year Books which are an authoritative mine of information for technicians and laymen alike, and reflect much credit upon the compilers whose purpose it has been to reduce, as far as possible—and often it is not—this mass of inchoate material to the form of comparable statistics.

The first thing that occurs to anyone trying to answer the arms race conundrum is to inquire into total national defense expenditures throughout the world.

World National Defense Expenditures.

(Billions of gold dollars at the old parity.)

1925	1926	1927	1928	1929
3.5	3.6	3.8	4.0	4.2
1930	1931	1932	1933	1934
4.3	4.3	4.2	4.4	4.9

It will be seen that aggregate world expenditure on armaments was gradually creeping up from 1925 to 1931, the year preceding the disarmament conference. That during the first year of the conference (1932) there was actually a slight drop. But that in 1933, when hopes of agreement were already receding, this fall was more than offset by a new rise. Finally that by 1934 the new arms race had begun.

ANOTHER table on page 1108 concerning naval tonnage reveals the same phenomena.

World Naval Tonnage.

1930	1931	1932	1933	1934	1935
5,461	5,441	5,299	5,598	5,830	6,013

There you have revealed, at a glance, the double tragedy of the Sino-Japanese conflict and the disarmament conference.

The world total for all defense expenditures in 1935 is not given. But one or two reliable estimates have been made on a comparable basis. The prewar figure (i. e., 1912-13) is estimated to be about 2.6 billion gold dollars.

Thus world expenditure on armaments, in 1935, is at least twice as high as it was before the war—a terrible reflection when one recalls the avowed objects of the victorious powers. True, wholesale prices in 1935 were up several points in comparison with prewar levels (in the United States the index was 107, i. e., up 7 per cent). But, of course, what might be styled the destructive potentiality of each dollar spent is infinitely greater in 1935 than in prewar days. The chief reason for this enormously enhanced expenditure is the mechanization and motorization of war. Effectives, generally speaking, remain pretty much where they were. The money has not gone into man power, but into machines—notably airplanes, tanks, more costly ships and guns, etc.

Comparisons of naval strength, thanks to the Washington and London conferences and the relative ease of numbering and checking ships, is fairly easy, even for the layman.

Comparison of armies, however, is rendered well nigh impossible by reason of the differences introduced into the figures through varied organization—period of service, trained reserves, colonial forces, semi-military forces, etc.

As for air forces, the fact that some countries have a separate air force, while others divide their aviation between the army and the navy, would be enough to befog the statistics anyway.

Comparison of national defense expenditure between one country and another is of very doubtful value.

Nevertheless, bearing this caution in mind, the following table has a certain interest as showing not accurate comparative costs as between the big powers but the rapid upward trend in arms expenditure for each power concerned. The figures for 1932 and 1935 are based on the Armaments Year Books. Those for 1909-13 are based on an article by Mr. P. Jacobson, a former member of the League secretariat, in the Economist.

National Defense Expenditures.
(Without Pensions.)

(In Millions of Gold Dollars.)

Country	Av. 1909-13	1932	1935
Russia	359*	727	...
Great Britain	350	429	531
Germany	359	151	†225
United States	300	641	907
France	300	423	420
Italy	126	285	232
Japan	96	342	509

(†1934.)

In connection with the above table the following facts have to be borne in mind. No figure is given for 1935, in the case of Russia, as any figure based on the theoretical relation between roubles and gold dollars gives a fantastically elevated result. The figures estimated in billions of roubles are: For 1934 (5), for 1935 (8.2), and for 1936 (14.8).

The latest figures for Germany that can even be guessed at with any accuracy relate to 1934.

It should now be clear why the question of publicity of national defense expenditures is no negligible question. If the draft convention already prepared should ever be approved and effectively operated it will usher in a new era for armaments statistics on account of the thoroughness and care with which it has been drafted.

That German-Italian Accord.

IN TRYING to estimate the significance of the agreement just reached by Germany and Italy, it is well to remember that this is the season of hobgoblins.

At first glance the accord is indeed an awe-inspiring product, opening up as it does vast possibilities of joint action by two powerful nations. Should it lead, as many fear it may, to an alliance between the Nazi and Fascist dictatorships it would mean the formation of a bloc stretching clear across Europe from the Baltic to Africa.

The combined standing armies of the two nations, even if we dismiss Mussolini's repeated boast of 8,000,000 Italian soldiers as Latin rodomontade, total more than a million and a quarter men. Both have tremendous air forces and their naval establishments are far from negligible. And behind these armed forces are well over 100,000,000 virile people regimented into docility and prepared to give unquestioned obedience to the will of their respective leaders. No wonder, then, that while exultation reigns in Berlin and Rome, a new crop of fears has arisen to plague the statesmen of other lands.

But is the German-Italian agreement as awesome as it appears to be? In our topsy-turvy world, where the impossible has all too often turned out to be the actual, it would be foolish, indeed, to deny that this accord may, under certain circumstances, develop into something of very great moment in the affairs of Europe. But there are good grounds for the belief that its appearance is more disturbing than the reality is likely to be; in other words the latest deal between Hitler and Mussolini may prove, as the 1934 deal proved, not a real monster but only a hollowed-out pumpkin whose fearsome light is provided by a lone candle.

BEFORE LEAVING Berlin, Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italy's foreign minister and son-in-law of Mussolini, issued a statement outlining the six points of agreement reached at Berchtesgarden.

Three of these are general in their nature. They voice a joint determination to "co-operate for European peace;" to co-operate "in the Denubian sector;" and to "defend European civilization against grave dangers threatening its social and cultural structure."

The remaining three points deal more specifically with problems of the day. They stipulate that economic concessions are to be granted to Germany in Ethiopia; that Spain's territorial and colonial integrity is to be preserved with recognition to be accorded Gen. Franco as head of the Spanish government once the rebels have taken Madrid; and that the two nations are to work together for the conclusion of a new Locarno pact to be confined strictly to western Europe.

It is clear from this that while the accord is extremely broad in its general nature it is largely lacking in detail. Some will argue that it was made so for tactical reasons. By encouraging other powers to let their fevered imaginations fill in the blanks those nations may be frightened into believing that a new combination has been established on the continent; one that can neither be ignored nor flouted. Thus the price which Germany and Italy will be able to command for their co-operation with the other powers, notably Great Britain and France, can be made a high one.

But it is at least equally conceivable that the vagueness of detail which stands out in the Ciano statement arises naturally out of any real lack of agreement except on the Ethioplan problem, the Spanish situation and the impending Locarno negotiations.

GERMANY'S recognition of Italy's suzerainty over Ethiopia is no doubt pleasing to Italian pride; but it has no very practical significance. Germany can not supply the funds which Italy needs to finance the exploitation of Ethiopia's alleged resources. As for Spain, the important point brought out by the Ciano statement is not the thinly disguised determination of the two Fascist powers to recognize the rebels as the real rulers of Spain at the earliest reasonable moment. Rome and Berlin would doubtlessly do just that with or without a prior agreement.

The important point is that the two powers favor "reconstruction of Spain's territorial and colonial integrity." This is both a bow in the direction of Great Britain, which neither power wants to offend, and an indication that Germany and Italy are fearful one will seek to secure an advantage over the other if and when the present Spanish government collapses.

The fact of the matter is that while Italy and Germany may, momentarily, be thrown together, the present harmony is probably a fragile thing. The increasing power of Germany is something which Italy can not view with complacence. Ultimately, Berlin will tend to overshadow Rome, not only in the Danubian area where a truce exists, not only in the Balkans where Germany's economic drive is sooner or later bound to cut across Italy's commercial ambitions, but in the entire international sphere as well.

FOR THAT VERY reason, however, the agreement reached with respect to the future of the Locarno pact can be taken at its face value. Italy may have no real interest in the anti-Russian crusade preached by the Nazis at Nuremberg. But Rome sees its own interests advanced by the establishment in Europe of a concert of powers, consisting of Italy, Germany, France and Great Britain, overshadowing and supplanting the League of Nations as the central organ of international affairs.

Long before Nuremberg such a four-power arrangement was advocated by Mussolini. Now Germany, eager to exclude Russia from any general peace settlement, finds in such a grouping the very instrument needed to achieve that purpose, while at the same time weakening the special links now existing between France and Russia and France and Great Britain.

But the co-operation between Berlin and Rome, indicated by their common enthusiasm for a limited Locarno pact, does not necessarily imply that they will, for any length of time, see eye to eye with each other on all other matters as well.

At best the friendship between Germany and Italy signalized by the Berchtesgarden accord is an agreement not to disagree rather than one to agree. In substance Duce and Fuehrer are holding hands so as to avoid temptation to strike each other.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

("Hotel owners have been advised by their attorneys that liquor may be served on election day provided it has been ordered, paid for and earmarked in advance."—News item.)

Manager, The —— Hotel:
My Dear Sir:

Having read the legal opinion of the hotel owners' counsel that a hotel may legally serve a drink to a man during election day provided he has ordered it, paid for it, and had it earmarked for him, this is to notify you of my desire to be in on the earmarks. I have a feeling that I shall require a bracer or two after the ordeal of voting, and a positive conviction that I shall need a few more snifters when the early returns come in. Suppose you earmark about 20 highballs for me.

• • • •

I do not, of course, expect to drink that many, but I am earmarking a few friends who, like myself, want a drink when they want it, and it seems that they have earmarked November 3 as one of the days when they expect to want it.

• • • •

Could you earmark a waiter? If so, I wish we could have the short dark fellow known as Waldo. He is very good and has the best ears for marking I ever saw.

• • • •

Now, how about free lunch? Do the election laws prohibit this? If so, will you earmark me about a dozen slices of bologna (the ideal election food), a pound of crackers and the usual quota of cheese, sardines and potato cnips. You might also earmark some pretzels, as I want everything legal, ethical and highly honorable all around.

• • • •

I appreciate the hotel's action in getting advice in the matter and thank you very deeply.

Yours Truly,
ELMER TWITCHELL.

Text of Landon's Labor Address

Labor has fairly won many victories in this country. Its greatest triumph has been won not on the field of battle but in the stronghold of public opinion.

The greatest victory of labor, in my opinion, has been to bring about the general recognition of an important principle. It is that national prosperity depends on labor's receiving an increasing share of the value of everything we produce. The truth of this principle is today accepted by the man who hires as well as by the man who toils. It is the foundation of increased production, greater national wealth, higher average purchasing power, and a larger measure of happiness for everyone.

Organized labor has been the natural champion of this principle. The Father of the American Federation of Labor, Samuel Gompers, was one of its first sponsors. As early as 1899, he declared:

"I believe that as time goes on, the wage earners will continue to become larger sharers per dollar of the wealth produced. I have no fear as to the future of organized labor."

Since then America has grown, and the organized Labor movement has grown along with the Nation.

That conviction of Mr. Gompers has become the conviction of every progressive citizen of this country. The capitalist who employs labor knows that ultimately the success of his enterprise depends on more widely distributed purchasing power. The banker who furnishes credit to the industrialist recognizes that higher wages, shorter hours and a constantly rising standard of living, create a greater demand for the output of his client.

Organized labor has become part and parcel of the framework of this democratic nation. The labor union, as public opinion recognizes, is an instrument of economic progress and national well-being. The day when the owner of a business knew personally every man in his employ and often his family is virtually gone with the development of vast industrial units.

I would like the workers of America, whether they are organized or unorganized, to understand clearly that their problems are familiar to me; that I myself have worked with my own hands; that I have earned wages, and that I am in deep sympathy with the point of view of the working men and the working women, and eager to co-operate with them.

For many years I have believed in the necessity for organization as a means of advancing the fortunes of the individual worker, raising his standard of living and giving him the position in the world to which he is entitled. It is a fact that the Supreme Court of the United States recognizes the right of organized labor through peaceful methods to extend organization to labor that is unorganized, that it recognizes the right to peaceful picketing, and generally that the law is on the side of those who as workers are eager to promote their own fortunes and those of their fellow workers in the same or other industries.

It is an old story that labor has the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of its own choosing without interference by employers. But like many another old story, it needs to be emphasized and applied. When I am President I will see to it that Federal laws for the protection of workers are enforced.

If this right of organized labor has been acquired through great sacrifice, it is all the more valuable because of the lesson of experience it has given us all. Today we know that progress comes through mutual understanding between labor and capital, reached through conferences based on the processes of collective bargaining.

As Mr. Gompers said "From the moment in which workers and employers negotiate and agree upon terms, hours, conditions, and wages, the principle of autocratic domination gives way to the principle of democratic co-operation." In those words Mr. Gompers stated the American way of meeting the labor problem. It is the truly democratic way. False liberalism and undisguised autocracy follow a different route. They do not bridge the chasm. They widen it. Theirs is the way of war; not of peace.

Mr. Gompers', great success in the cause of organized labor lay in his genius in recognizing that the situation of the working man in this country is different from that of labor in the old world. In most European nations labor has become a class apart. In America labor always has been merged in the Nation as a whole.

Labor in this country has progressed by following the Gompers policy of keeping free from entanglement with any political group. That policy more than anything else is responsible for the steady advance it has made. In the United States real wages have constantly increased, but at the same time labor has retained its freedom. More than that, it has won general recognition of its right to freedom of action.

We are witnessing in this country today an effort to introduce into the camp of American labor the European system of political alliances which invariably victimizes labor. In trying times leaders always arise who claim they can deliver the labor vote to one political camp or the other. Back in 1904 even Mr. Gompers himself was accused of belonging to this class. The cry was raised: "Gompers has promised to deliver the labor vote." Years later when writing the story of his life he made reply. I quote:

"I knew full well that I could not deliver the labor vote nor did I make any such promise or pretense. It was simply absurd for anyone to charge that I had in mind either the desire or the will or the ability to deliver the labor vote.

"To meet that unjust criticism and attack I frequently declared upon the public platform as well as in conference and writings that I had not the power to deliver the vote of any man. The only vote which I controlled was my own." Mr. Gompers spoke truly. No one can deliver the labor vote of America to any one political party. No one can deliver the farm vote of America to any one political party. No one can deliver any other class vote in America to any one political party.

Why? Because there are no classes in America. We are one Nation and one people. We are a Nation of individuals and of freemen. As freemen we may differ in our opinions on national affairs. But we are one people however much we may differ.

That is the unique feature of our American system. Any one who claims to be able to deliver, or strives to deliver any part of the American people to a political master is betraying the creed of America. Such a person is sowing the seeds of destruction for all of us. He threatens to destroy the one classless nation in a world divided by class hatred and overshadowed by the tragedy of disunion.

Let us stand in the future, as in the past, a united people, a united Nation!

Now, in conclusion, I want to discuss another matter of deep concern to labor.

I have been frankly exposing the inadequacies, the inequalities, the dangers, and the disappointments inherent in the compulsory insurance programs of the New Deal. At the same time I have been offering in its stead a practical and a constructive program of real security.

The present Administration claims that the burdens of the social security act fall mainly upon the employers. The real facts are that they fall almost entirely on the workers. They must pay twice; once directly when the tax is deducted from their pay envelopes in increasing amounts until it reaches 3 per cent. They must pay again indirectly in reduced employment, higher prices, or lower wages. These inevitably must result from the 6 per cent payroll taxes on their employers, who must pass on these increased costs to the public in one form or another.

I have already pointed out that about half o four workers, those engaged in agriculture, household work and the like, are excluded from the benefit of the act; that this is the largest tax measure in our history; that the younger workers are forced to carry a disproportionately higher share of the burden than the older workers; and the Federal bureaucrats will check and recheck every pay envelope and every shift of jobs of every man and woman covered by th act.

I have also shown that the act does not set up a true insurance plan; that the taxes collected are not held in any savings or reserve fund as claimed. Instead they are diverted into Government bonds. I. O. U.'s.

When payments become due, they must be currently authorized by Congress and newly financed. The act at best is only a promise of the Government to raise money at some future time—if it can. Meanwhile the proceeds of these taxes in the hands of this Administration will be used to meet current deficits and future extravagances. This is not social security. It will create social insecurity.

On the other hand, we Republicans have pledged ourselves to provide assistance to the needy, blind and crippled, to foster the promotion of child welfare and the improvement of the public health service.

Our platform proposes to encourage adoption by the States of honest and practical programs of unemployment insurance. This position is taken because all past experience has been a bitter disappointment. Practically every plan has broken down after a few months in the face of a depression of any duration. The only real reserve to meet prolonged unemployment is sound Government credit based upon a balanced budget and a low national debt. These facilities ,necessarydifedodsi These facilitate necessary borrowing time of need.

We Republicans further pledge ourselves to provide every American citizen over 65 with the supplementary payment necessary to give a minimum income sufficient to protect him or her from want. This is a genuine old-age pension plan which, I have always believed, should not be based on the pauper's oath, although this oath may be required under the present social security act.

Our plan of Federal grants-in-aid by the States will be on a pay-as-you-go basis. The necessary funds will be raised by means of special tax, directly levied, and widely distributed. For, only if everyone bears his just share can we hope to prevent the plan being used for political purposes. Our program contemplates administration by the States on a non-political basis in order to end centralized control in Washington.

My criticism of the present act is not that its purpose is bad. It is that this act will involve a cruel disappointment for those of our people least able to bear the shock of disappointment.

To these—our old people and our workers struggling for better conditions, I will not promise the moon. I promise only what I know can be performed: economy, a living pension, and such security as can be provided by a generous people.

Service Charge For Suburban Water Cut $1

17,000 Users in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties to Profit.

Seventeen thousand families in the Washington Sanitary Commission area will benefit from a $1 a year reduction in the service charges on their water bills, it was announced yesterday by T. Howard Duckett, chairman of the commission.

The new rate also will lower the charge to the larger water consumers—such as business houses—$39 a year. There are 750 of the larger meters in the area. The total saving to consumers, Mr. Duckett estimated, would be $20,000 annually.

The present service charges to families in the suburban district is $4, paid in $2 allotments semi-annually. Beginning immediately, Mr. Duckett said, the charge will appear on the bills as $1.50.

The Suburban Sanitary Commission district includes Glen Echo, Chevy Chase, Bethesda, Garrett Park, Kensington, Silver Spring, Takoma Park, Forest Glen and Hillendale, all in Montgomery County. In Prince Georges County the district includes Mount Rainier, Brentwood, Hyattsville, College Park, Branchville, Berwyn, Bladensburg, Cheverly, Seat Pleasant, Maryland Park, Capitol Heights, Greater Capitol Heights, Bradbury Heights, District Heights, Decatur Heights, Cottage City, Colmar Manor and Tuxedo. In addition, water lines are at present being laid to Lanham and Landover, Harry R. Hall, chief engineer, said last night.

A considerable increase in water consumption in the suburban area and greater efficiency of operation at the new Morse filter plant, at Burnt Mills, which serves the district, were responsible for making the saving possible, according to the sanitary commission.

Since January 1, 1936, it was said, the commission has made 2,346 house connections within the district. Applications for house connections are being received at the rate of 82 a week.

Mrs. Potwin Dies In New York at 83

Widow of Maj. George C. Potwin, U. S. A., a veteran of the Civil War and the Indian Wars, Mrs. Potwin moved to Washington with her husband in 1898, when he was appointed to a post with the War Department.

While she resided here she was a member of the Ab-ra-ca-da-bra Club, the First Congregational Church and the Wheel Club. She was active in social and welfare circles. About two years ago she left for New York, to take up her residence with her son.

Mrs. Potwin was the mother of the late Mrs. Jessie Potwin Deyoe. She is survived only by her son and his family.

Mrs. Jennie Haslam Funeral Rite Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Jennie Haslam, 57, former Washington resident, will be held at 2:30 p. m. today at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ellen Reeves, 409 Twelfth street northwest. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Haslam, widow of the Rev. James Haslam, Methodist Protestant clergyman, died Sunday in Oswego, N. Y. She had lived in Washington for 30 years before going to Oswego 3 years ago.

Surviving, besides Mrs. Reeves, are another daughter, Mrs. Elsie Steen, of Oswego; a niece, Mrs. Clay E. Peacock, of Atlanta, Ga., and eight grandchildren.

Vandal Hurls Brick Through Shop Window

A brick was hurled through the plate glass window of the barber shop of George A. Robinson in the 1400 block of New York avenue northwest last night, littering the floor with shattered glass.

Police said the missile was hurled by one of a group of pickets who have watched the place for the past several weeks protesting what they term "unfair hours and labor practices" in the shop, which they say remains open on Sundays, although it closes on Monday under the law.

$5 Checks Sent Colored Clerics Passed 'Unnoticed' by G.O.P.

The Republican Party in Maryland is so busy mailing out checks these days that distribution of $5 gifts to more than 400 colored clergymen passed almost unnoticed at the campaign headquarters in Baltimore, William P. Lawson, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, revealed yesterday.

The checks, accompanied by a letter reminding the clergymen of their "obligation to support" the Landon-Knox ticket, were signed by Lawson and Henry Lay Duer, Republican State campaign manager.

"I sign a great many checks, about 1,000 a day," Lawson said after The Washington Post revealed the distribution of cash gifts to clergymen. "I don't know a thing about this. The colored situation is handled through national headquarters."

The Rev. Albert J. Mitchell, District superintendent of the Washington Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church (colored) said he had mailed the checks to the clergymen. Mitchell, in addition to being District superintendent, is chairman of the Clergy Crusaders Circle of Maryland for Landon and Knox.

"I sent out the letters," Mitchell said. "I reminded our pastors of their obligations to support the ticket of Landon and Knox. We took care of the expenses of any man who made any speeches and for his time and trouble. We left it up to the pastors whether the money would go to their churches or to themselves."

Asked if he could explain why the checks were signed by Lawson and Duer, Mitchell said: "You'll have to ask them." Duer declined to comment. Dr. Mitchell said not all the letters contained checks, however.

B'nai B'rith Lodge Hears Rosenblum

Rabbi William F. Rosenblum, of Temple Israel, New York City, last night urged Jews to live for the future, not for the immediate present.

Speaking at Past Presidents' Night of Argo Lodge, B'nai B'rith, held at Jewish Community Center last night, Rabbi Rosenblum asked Jews to refuse to cringe before bigotry or tyranny.

In that way, he said, the future of the race would be preserved and the Jews of tomorrow would attain new heights and a new sense of dignity.

Firemen, Police Guests of K. of C.

More than 300 smoke-eaters and guardians of the law gathered last night at Knights of Columbus Hall, 920 Tenth street northwest, for the first of two smokers given by the Policemen and Firemen's Catholic Society for non-Catholic members of the two departments.

Speeches, amateur and professional entertainment and refreshments made up the program. Master of ceremonies was Harry S. Bell, of No. 24 Engine Co., who is president of the society.

Among the speakers were Leo A. Rover, former district attorney; Fire Marshal Calvin Lauber, Inspector Ed Kelly, the Rev. Thomas Dade, assistant pastor of St. Patrick's Church, and Lee Everett, WMAL announcer.

Former Premier Dies.

London, Oct. 28 (AP).—Sir Newton Moore, 63, former premier of Western Australia and former president of the Dominion Steel & Coal Corporation of Canada, died today in a London nursing home following an operation. He sat in the House of Commons as a Conservative from 1918 until 1932.

TAKE WEIGHT OFF TIRED FEET

Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Reducing Exercises.

If your feet and ankles feel tired and ache all over—because you are carrying too much fat—do something about it. Try the treatment that has helped millions to reduce excess weight.

There's a reason why so many people find dieting slow and often times futile in reducing. The reason, doctors say, is often because a little gland is not working right.

All the blood in your body goes through this tiny gland sixteen times every day. If it doesn't pour into the blood stream about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat. This fluid helps Nature to "burn up" excess food and fatty tissue in much the same way as a good "draft" acts in a furnace.

Now, physicians combat this condition by feeding this gland the substance it lacks — and millions of pounds of excess fat has been wiped out in this way.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on the same method used by doctors. So don't waste your time or money striving to reduce with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Start the Marmola treatment today that millions have used successfully to get rid of excess fat. The formula is in every box so you know just what you are taking. Don't wait—get a box of Marmola today from your druggist.

One Freed, 2 Held In Demonstration At PWA Quarters

Judge John P. McMahon released John Kelly, of Lancaster, Pa., on the statement "there is no evidence before me this man was disorderly."

A legal squabble between Defense Attorney Frederick A. Ballard and Corporation Counsel George D. Nielson, prosecutor, over "what constitutes a parade" resulted in the continuance of the cases of Robert Benjamin and David Lasser.

Judge McMahon continued the case until November 7 at which time he instructed Ballard to present to the court a brief on "what constitutes a parade in the District."

Rites Tomorrow For Mrs. Hutchins

Funeral services for Mrs. Minnie Hutchins, 69, a lifelong resident of Washington, will be held at 11 a. m. Friday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John F. McCambridge, 102 Summerfield road, Chevy Chase, Md. Burial will be in Prospect Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Hutchins died Tuesday night at her daughter's home. She was the widow of Edward S. Hutchins, a bookkeeper for many years at the D. J. Kaufman store. Her father, the late Frederick Sellhausen, was a well-known wholesale tobacco dealer here.

Surviving, besides her daughter, are two sons, Irving E. and Ralph F. Hutchins; a brother, Otto E. Sellhausen, of Ontario, Calif., and two grandchildren.

Slugging Victim Dies in Hospital

Thomas Frisby, colored, 28, died yesterday in Emergency Hospital of injuries suffered Monday when he was slugged with a brick by a mysterious assailant in an apartment house at 1507 M street northwest, where he was employed as a hallboy.

Police believe Frisby might have been attacked when he surprised a thief at work in the early morning hours. It was pointed out that several weeks ago three residents of the apartment were robbed.

Frisby died without regaining consciousness. In his delirium he constantly shouted "don't hit me again," but did not say anything that might lead to identity of the murderer, police said. Another hallboy at the apartment is being held for questioning in connection with the crime.

Owner Buys Back Medal Lost in '02; Discovered by Boy

A medal lost 34 years ago, when he lived at 117 South Fairfax street, yesterday was recovered by Jerome Kaufman, of Alexandria.

Fashioned of gold, the medal was presented to Kaufman upon his graduation from old St. John's Academy, and lost shortly afterward. It represents the "serious days and the gay days" of his student youth.

According to officials, the medal was brought to the jewelry store of Saunders & Son yesterday by a colored boy. The proprietors, observing Kaufman's name on the back, telephoned him. Kaufman bought the medal back.

Forgotten 1936 Issues To Be Symposium Topic

"Forgotten Issues of the Campaign" will be the subject of the symposium to be sponsored by the Capital City Forum at its headquarters at 1502 Fourteenth street northwest at 8:15 p. m. tomorrow.

David H. Felix, Philadelphia labor attorney, and Gil Stinger, of the National Council for the Prevention of War, will discuss what they think are the neglected issues. A general discussion will follow.

Family of 4 Wiped Out By Murder and Suicide

Akron, Ohio, Oct. 28 (AP).—Relatives, paying a call to the home of William Harrison Slaybaugh, 46, of suburban Cuayhoga Falls, found the entire family of four wiped out by rifle fire tonight.

The dead were Slaybaugh, his wife, Josephine, 42, and their son, William, jr., 12, and daughter Marilyn, 10. County Prosecutor Harman E. Werner said Slaybaugh shot his wife and his children, then himself. He was a draftsman at the B. F. Goodrich Co. plant here. Werner said neighbors reported that Slaybaugh had complained of a severe headache for several days.

Are You Guarding Your Child THIS WAY—Asking Your Doctor About Home Remedies You Use?

Practically every mother knows the physician's rule. Don't give your child unknown remedies without asking your doctor first. Children's specialists give this warning continually. And educators and writers on child welfare repeat it everywhere.

When it comes to the widely used children's remedy — "milk of magnesia" — many doctors for over half a century have said "PHILLIPS." For Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is the standard of the world. Safe for children. Made by an original process in a laboratory devoted solely to making this important remedy; there is no other "quite like it."

Keep this in mind, and say "PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA" when you buy. Comes now, also in tablet form. Tablets that taste like peppermint candy, and that contain the equivalent of the liquid Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Get the form you prefer. But see that what you get is labeled "Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia." 25¢ for a big box of tablets.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM: Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Poll Is Started To Test Views On Gas Levies

Auto Club Seeks Reaction to Proposed Boost in D. C. Taxes.

A city-wide poll of District motorists was started yesterday by the A. A. A. District Motor Club in efforts to determine public reaction to threatened increases in local automobile taxes.

Through a statement by Russell E. Singer, general manager of the association, the Washington club indicated its campaign in opposition to tax increases would be pressed.

"The threat to increase local motor levies appears more serious now than ever before," Singer said. "This danger can be averted only by concerted opposition on the part of Washington car owners.

"Through city-wide distribution of tax ballots, the voteless citizens of the National Capital will be given an opportunity to express their sentiments on this matter and their views will be laid before the District Commissioners and the District Committees of Congress," Singer asserted.

Opposition to any increase in such taxes was voted unanimously by the A. A. A. women's safety committee at its first meeting of the current season in the Sulgrave Club.

The committee adopted a resolution against the increase of the gasoline tax or imposition of a weight tax, and favoring a Federal contribution toward street and highway expenses following an extended discussion of the tax situation in the District.

Three Permits Revoked.

Thirty-day suspensions—Jennings L. Burton, Takoma Park, Md., 44 miles; Randolph Collick, Baltimore, Md., 45 miles; Evelyn Harrison, Hyattsville, Md., 42 miles; William F. Higgins, Baltimore, Md., 45 miles; Lewis S. Horowitz, Paterson, N. J., 45 miles; Harry L. Kimble, Alexandria, Va., 46 miles; Samuel McKenzie, Clarendon, N. C., 50 miles; Paul E. Powers, Hancock, Md., 50 miles.

Transit Officials Study 5-Year Plan

The Capital Transit Co.'s directors soon will act on the proposal of Riley E. Elgen, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, that a five-year program of street car modernization be adopted by the company, E. D. Merrill, vice president and general manager, said yesterday.

Merrill said a preliminary study was being made, but said no forecast could be made now on how rapidly obsolete cars can be replaced. Moreover, he added, the determining factor would be the net revenue available.

Merrill added that it may be several weeks before the directors will act.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

United States Marine Band Orchestra opens its season in the Marine Barracks auditorium with Capt. Taylor Branson, conductor, and Harold Cardy, soloist. Program: Overture, "In Autumn" (Grieg), Theme and Variations from "Mozartiana" Suite (Chaikovski), Concert in E flat major for horn (Mozart), Symphony No. 5 in E flat major (Sibelius), Symphonic Poem, "Stenka Razin" (Glazunov).

Appropriate to the season of morning frosts and falling leaves was Edward Grieg's autumnal overture with which Capt. Branson began last evening's concert. It is probably the least effective of that composer's works for orchestra because in it he tried his prentice hand, but it is tinged throughout with the lyric charm which was his peculiar gift. Both Scottish and Norwegian traits were his heredity, and no one caught better than he the melancholy sweetness of Northern folk song.

Although Chaikovski is not usually classed as a master of variation, his work in the art of embroidering themes deserves study. He had an adroitness in altering accents and disguising a tune almost beyond recognition, while retaining its identity, and his skill in rhythmic changes is ever interesting. In the last movement of the "Mozartiana" suite he gave full play to his imagination and humor, and produced ingenious effects that Mozart would have enjoyed.

The delightful Mozart concerto was a welcome novelty. Opportunities to hear any horn concerto are pearly as rare as the first Wednesday after the fourth Thursday in October, the day when this chance arrived. The E flat major concerto is a lovely piece of melodic fancy with a gay allegro, a wistful and nostalgic larghetto, and a finale of captivating liveliness. It was excellently played by Harold Cardy, who blows a fine, mellow tone with an ease that indicates firm breath control.

The E flat major symphony of Sibelius, which Capt. Branson has presented before, stands between the tragic fourth and the sober sixth symphonies like a genial giant. Its pulsing vitality and its rich sonorities convey the impression of immensity, of an expansion beyond terrestrial bounds. Cecil Gray happily compared it to ruddy Beteleguese, an apt simile for its radiant dimensions. The orchestra is not yet thoroughly at home in this work and there were passages that sounded tentative and groping.

Episcopal Hospital To Hold Tea Today

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, will welcome guests at the annual tea of the Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital today from 4 until 6 p. m. at the nurse home at 1440 M street northwest. The tea is sponsored by the board of lady managers and the hospital superintendent, the Rev. Calvert E. Buck. Bishop Freeman is president ex-officio of the hospital.

Doctor Convicted Of Malpractice

Dr. Macpherson Crichton, member of several Washington clubs, and socially prominent, was convicted in District Court late yesterday of performing an illegal operation on a young woman who took the stand to testify against him.

Justice Peyton Gordon permitted the physician, who is 64, and who had been residing in Washington for approximately 30 years, to remain at liberty on bond of $1,000 while defense attorneys prepare their arguments for a new trial.

Dr. Crichton, who steadfastly denied he had performed the operation, took the verdict with calm. He testified he had treated the woman but had not taken part in, nor had any knowledge of the operation. Testimony indicated the authorities were brought into the case when the management of a downtown hotel, where the girl was taken, notified them.

Jury Hears Testimony on Numerous Lootings of Northeast Homes.

Wilton P. Thompson, alleged colored "Raffles," yesterday was indicted by the grand jury on 13 charges of housebreaking following testimony that he had entered numerous Northwest homes and had stolen a large quantity of household goods.

In eight of the cases, Louis Fanning was charged with complicity with Thompson, and in four of them, Lucius McKay was named as a participant.

In another indictment reported to Justice Peyton Gordon, in District Court, George W. Bryan, 24, was charged with attempting to rob Miss Hester H. Tongue, an employe of the Allies Inn, of the restaurant's receipts last October 17. Miss Tongue testified she was crossing at Seventeenth and F streets northwest when Bryan attempted to grab a satchel containing $1,634.06. Her screams brought passersby to her aid and Bryan was captured near the Corcoran Art Gallery.

Two men charged with having violated the Harrison narcotic act within the shadows of District Court were indicted on narcotic charges. They were Clifton Lee Carter and Curtis Carter. Both were arrested last August after Federal agents allegedly had purchased drugs from them.

Those indicted were:

About 5 per cent of Washington's school children have appreciable defects in hearing, Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, director of medical inspection in the District schools, told the open meeting of the Washington League for the Hard of Hearing at the Y. W. C. A. last night.

The gathering climaxed the observance of National Hearing week, which is being conducted throughout the Nation.

Dr. Murphy explained that the percentage included those youngsters who had a loss of 9 or more sensation units, making them 9 per cent defective.

He spoke of the need for testing the hearing of children, and outlined numerous diseases which bring in their wake deafness.

He added that the scholastic records of those whose hearing was definitely below normal were much poorer than the average, and urged lip-reading classes and other means of segregation for deaf students.

The work of the Washington League for the Hard of Hearing, its classes, its studies and its recreations, were explained by Miss Ada Morgan Hill, past president of the District chapter.

Members and guests were welcomed to the meeting by the president, George R. Dickson, and there was community singing.

White Slave Case Mistrial Ordered

Because of improperly received evidence, Justice James M. Proctor in District Court yesterday ordered a mistrial in the case of Mary Sherman, alias Mary Hipple, Joseph Marbeck, Joseph Sherman and Jean Gordon, all of whom were charged with conspiring to violate the white slave traffic act.

Justice Proctor, over the objections of Defense Attorneys F. Joseph Donohoe and Myron Ehrlich, admitted evidence which the attorneys contended was improper. After thinking over the matter, the jurist reversed himself and since evidence based upon the reversal had already been unfolded to the jury, he directed that a mistrial be recorded and that an early date be set for a second hearing.

The defendants were charged with bringing to Washington from West Virginia a young woman, who testified she had been brought here for immoral purposes.

N.B.C. Planning Smaller Scale Radio City Here

Second Floor of Trans-Lux Building Leased for WRC and WMAL.

Planned on a smaller scale, a "Radio City" such as houses the National Broadcasting Co.'s headquarters in New York City will be opened in Washington in May or June of 1937, according to an announcement yesterday by Lenox R. Lohr, president of the broadcasting company.

The new N. B. C. headquarters here will be on the second floor of the Trans-Lux Theater Building now under construction on Fourteenth street between H street and New York avenue. About 15,000 square feet of floor space will be occupied by studios, engineering equipment and offices.

Decision to occupy the new theater building came after construction began and alterations in plans are now being made to accommodate the unusually high ceilings required for broadcasting studios.

Studios to Merge.

Studios of WMAL, now located at 712 Eleventh street, will be merged with those of WRC in the new location. All N. B. C. operations will be consolidated, including network operations now carried on in space rented from the National Press Club.

The new location gives N. B. C. double the space now occupied by the company's activities in Washington, according to Frank M. Russell, vice president in Washington.

"We plan to give Washington a real radio 'show place,'" Russell said. "There will be an audience studio 26 by 40 feet, with an elevated observation room; two program studios, 14 by 27 feet; two speaker studios, 14 by 14 feet; auditorium rooms, a music library, an artists' lounge, laboratories, offices and a master control room, 24 by 28 feet. The entire floor will be air-conditioned."

Separate Entrance.

N. B. C.'s quarters will be reached by a separate entrance on Fourteenth street, near the New York avenue end of the building.

No transmitter locations will be affected by the move. All engineering and technical developments were worked out by O. B. Hnason, N. B. C., chief engineer, who had charge of building and installing the equipment in New York's Radio City.

"We are proud to have the National Broadcasting Co. in our new building," said L. E. Thompson, president of the Trans-Lux Washington Corporation. "We have spared no expense in making our theater building an entertainment center for the Capital. Our hope has been more fully realized now that arrangements have been made whereby N. B. C. will take the entire second floor."

Capital Attorney Hurt in Accident

Frank J. Hogan, Washington attorney, was cut and bruised early yesterday when the automobile in which he was a passenger ran into a ditch on a highway near Chicago.

At her Massachusetts avenue home last night Mrs. Hogan, wife of the lawyer, said she had talked with her husband by telephone. She described his injuries as "superficial."

Hogan, the Associated Press reported, was returning after a tour of the North Shore with a friend when the accident occurred.

The Black Automatic

Chapter XXIV.

With a grin on his swart young face, Tah-Gomaugh repeated the wild-eyed story which his brother had told him, two moons ago. Early that summer, during the Moon-of-No-Nights, this brother and another youngster went hunting bighorns in the headwaters country northwest of the Dinokui basin. One day when they were walking along the shore of a moraine lake, a great red-and-black creature, in form like the mosquito-wolf or dragonfly but with a body bigger than a canoe and with the wing-spread of five eagles, flapped out from behind a mountain and swooped down at them like a hungry hawk upon a lemming, with a bellowing voice louder than a thunder-roll.

Only by quick work, by leaping for a pile of avalanche debris and squirming back among the dank logs and rocks, did they save themselves from being seized and eaten.

Baffled and so angry that it spat fire, the huge creature cunningly lit at the upper end of the lake and hid itself behind a willow islet, waiting for them to venture out.

But they were too wise for that. For six whole rounds of the sun they stayed back in that dark cold tangle, till the great bird-beast finally got tired of waiting and flew away, over the eastern mountains.

"And they said," Tah-Gomaugh chuckled feebly, "that it flap wings, spit fire, bellow, try to eat them up!" He laughed at the thought of how his imaginative brother had shivered in that cold debris for nearly a week, afraid of a mere airplane. "You never hear crazier story as that, huh?"

Noel managed to laugh heartily, and agreed that the incident was a great joke on this stupid brother. But within himself he did not laugh. The story was too portentous. That red-and-black bird-beast was nothing more or less than Jimmy DeLong's red-and-black Diomede. And that moraine lake, or its immediate vicinity, held Jimmy's secret, the rich placer.

With a dead pipe in his teeth, he gazed thoughtfully into the northwest, at those dark and forbidding headwater mountains. Up yonder, 30 miles distance, lay Jimmy's fatal prize. Only 30 miles—and he had come 3,000 on this hunt! Step by step, through good luck and bad, he had steadily closed in till now he could lift his eyes and see the end of his long trail.

"Richer than Fraser's Cradle in the Golden Caribou"—that's what Jimmy had said. What sort of place was it? A pocket in some dark canyon? A dried-up lake, ages old? Or some geological prank played by the mountain gods who had built these Silvertips so helter-skelter?

He wanted to go up there and have a look at that mysterious prize, but the dark mystery surrounding Raphael Flood lured him even more. Back to Manitou, keeping himself alive, boring into Flood and his unknown background, yanking the man and his career out of the shadows into the light of day—that was his job and his line of thrust now.

At sunrise he dropped his work and went up there, sharply uneasy.

One glance told him that she had not been around since last twilight.

"Have you seen anything of Miss Harla since daybreak?" Noel asked him.

"Ain't bothered to look."

"Why in hell," Noel demanded, in hot anger, "didn't you keep these fires going and watch after this camp? And how can you squat there cooking breakfast for your own healthy self when here's a bunch of sick women and kids needing food and care?"

"I'm not flunkeying for any Smokies. I'm a Mounted fellow, and don't you forget that."

Noel went on, found Tah-Gomaugh awake, bade him tell the Dinokui women to look in all the stone houses for Harla and search the whole upper camp.

He himself hurried over to the river-edge pines, thinking that Harla might have spread her blanket roll in the quiet of that drogue.

She was not there.

When he came back, Tah-Gomaugh reported that she was nowhere within the upper village.

A cold fear seized Noel. Something had happened to Harla, in the twilight of last evening. Where was she? What was the nature of this oblivion which had reached out and touched her?

There was a chance, one in a hundred, that she had outwitted him and slipped back to Manitou, to settle her score with Flood. She might have connived with Strap or even stowed away on the big Bellanca.

"When and where did you last see her?" he asked Tah-Gomaugh.

The young Indian thought for a moment. "Last time was up by that wall, when she fix my fire, fix me for sleep."

This flat-out statement, exploding any possibility that Harla had returned to Manitou, fairly dazed Noel. For a little space he leaned weakly against the stone wall, with something near to panic gripping him. The avalanche which he had expected and dreaded for days had at last piled down, and it was Harla who had been caught in the slideway.

The nature of her vanishing was as clear to him as if he had seen the incident with his own eyes. Since disposing of Jimmy, Flood had established a camp up yonder at that placer. Yesterday a canoe party of his men had dropped down the Dinokui River and scouted out this village. In the owl-dusk of last evening they had landed on this island and watched for a clean chance to sieze Harla. When she went over among those dark pines for the smudge stuff, she had walked squarely into their hands.

Fighting against this dread guess, he hurried back to the kozgee camp and ordered eight of the Dinokui men to comb the entire island, look for Harla, look carefully for any suspicious tracks or signs.

While they were doing this, he himself tried to work, but the work dropped from his hands, and he stood by the kozgee door, looking up across the island, praying to see Harla appear yonder among the rocks and pines. But he knew, in his heart, that somewhere on the upper Dinokui she was lying bound in a canoe that was headed for Flood's main camp.

It seemed unbelievable that Flood would venture so brazen a move at so critical a time. Didn't the man realize that Harla DeLong was a person of some importance and that her disappearance would not be unnoticed? Didn't he know that the crime would surely be charged to him?

Goering Cuts Weight In Economic Drive

Berlin, Oct. 28 (AP).—Rotund Air Minister Hermann Wilhelm Goering disclosed today that he lost 20 pounds and 8 ounces by eating less butter, and said that Chancellor Hitler ate no butter at all.

Speaking in Hitler's "four-year plan" for conservation of raw materials and economic rehabilitation of the Reich, Goering said the Nazi leadership was determined to set an example by making sacrifices.

"Butter?" he said. "Why, I have cut down my butter consumption and lost 20 pounds 8 ounces. What's more, I can tell you Der Fuehrer himself eats no butter at all, and no meat."

Soviet Revalues Ruble With Franc

Moscow, Oct. 28 (U.P.).—The Soviet government tonight revealed its currency, which was pegged to the French franc, to correspond with Paris' recent devaluation.

The Council of People's Commissars issued a decree fixing the value of the ruble at 4¼ francs. Previously the Russian currency had been pegged at 3 gold francs.

The order, it was said, does not affect other currencies in proportion, but was issued merely as a result of the devaluation of the franc. Officials said the decree applied to all exchange operations, both import and export.

Miss Elizabeth Marston and Mrs. Elizabeth Jarrett Become Brides of Captains in Service Weddings

By Marylyn Reeve.

Two more marriages were added to the rapidly lengthening chain of Service marriages yesterday when Miss Elizabeth Worthington Marston, daughter of Col. John Marston, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Marston, became the bride of Capt. John Seymour Letcher, U. S. M. C., son of Capt. and Mrs. Greenlee D. Letcher, of Lexington, Va., and when Mrs. Elizabeth Jarrett and Capt. Richard Yule were married.

The wedding of Miss Marston took place at 4 o'clock in the afternoon in St. Alban's Church, with the Rev. Charles D. Warner officiating.

Mrs. Thomas Harrison Shepard, her matron of honor and only attendant, wore a frock of rose beige bengaline trimmed in rust and a hat of matching shade in velvet. She carried a bouquet of rust-colored chrysanthemums.

Capt. W. Irving Jordan, U. S. M. C., was best man. Ushers were Capt. M. L. Dawson, Capt. S. T. Clarke, Lieut. A. L. Bowser, all of the Medical Corps, and Lieut. Joseph Worthington, U. S. N.

Reception Held.

A reception at the home of the bride's parents followed the ceremony. The bride's mother wore a gown of green lace with black accessories and a corsage of white gardenias. After the reception, Capt. Letcher and his bride left for a cruise to the West Indies, the latter wearing a three-piece green wool suit, with black accessories. On their return they will reside at the Marine Barracks in Quantico.

Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding were the father of the bridegroom, Judge John Paul, of Harrisonburg, Va., and Capt. Charles Paul, of Richmond.

The quaint little Fort Myer Chapel, with its colorful array of flags, was the scene of the wedding of Mrs. Jarrett, daughter of Mrs. John W. Gill, of Bolling Green, Va., and Capt. Yule, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Yule, of Fort Collins, Colo., which took place at noon. The ceremony was performed in the presence of the officers of the post and their wives and friends by Chaplain Ralph Diebert.

Dressed in Green.

The bride wore a smart suit of dark green, trimmed with a luxurious collar of cross fox. Her small hat was of the same shade of felt. With this she wore black accessories and a corsage of orchids.

Her only attendant was Miss Betty Gass, who was costumed in mahogany brown and wore a corsage of talisman roses. Maj. George Millholland, served as best man and after the ceremony there was a small reception at his home. Later the bridal couple, on the Fort Myer tally-ho, was escorted to the gate and started by motor for Fort Moultrie, S. C., where Capt. Yule has been ordered for duty.

Mrs. Marshall Becomes Bride

Mrs. Helen Hood Marshall, daughter of Mrs. Robert Hood, of Washington, and the late Mr. Hood, was married yesterday at 2 o'clock to Mr. Wilson Compton Ferguson, of Charles County, Md. The ceremony took place at All Souls Church, the Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Dr. E. Edward Garrett. She wore a sapphire blue velvet gown trimmed with cream lace, and a blue velvet hat. Around her neck was an antique chain of gold, which was presented by her grandfather to her grandmother on their wedding day. Her corsage was of roses and lilies of the valley.

The bride's only attendant was Miss Roslyn Butler, of Baltimore, who wore a frock of green and gold lame and a corsage of gardenias. Mr. Merrill Ferguson was his brother's best man.

Marriage Announced.

Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, Chief of the Army Air Corps, and Mrs. Westover announce the marriage of their daughter, Kathryn Patricia, to Lieut. Wilhelm Cunisse Srevdenthal, of the United States Air Corps, on October 24, at Fort Sam Houston, Tex.

Doris Brougher's Wedding Surprises Her Classmates

A wedding which came as a complete surprise to most of her classmates at American University was that of Miss Doris Brougher, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. W. E. Brougher, of Charleston, W. Va., and Lieut. Bogardus Snowden Cairns, of Fort Riley, Kans., which took place Tuesday in Charleston.

The bride, who would have been graduated from the university in June, met Lieut. Cairns at Camp Perry, Ohio, last summer while her father was there as range commander.

The informal ceremony was performed at high noon at St. John's Episcopal Church by the rector. The couple left, after a small reception, for Fort Riley, where Lieut. Cairns is stationed and where his father, Maj. D. W. Cairns, also is on duty.

Miss Robertson Is Married Here

The wedding of Miss Mary Elizabeth Robertson, daughter of Dr. James A. Robertson, archivist of the Maryland Hall of Records, and Mrs. Robertson, to Mr. John W. Bornman, of Clarksdale, Miss., took place at 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at All Souls Unitarian Church. The Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce performed the ceremony, which was followed by a reception in the parish house.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of eggshell velvet reaching to the floor and a Juliet cap embroidered with seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of white roses.

Miss Mary Rovane, the maid of honor, wore a corn-colored velvet frock, and the bridesmaids, the Misses Priscilla Barrows and Jessie Harden, were dressed in frocks of the same material in autumn shades. All three attendants carried bouquets of chrysanthemums.

Mr. Fred Bornman served as his cousin's best man and the ushers were Mr. James Robertson and Mr. Richard Robertson, brothers of the bride.

Mrs. Gerry Here To Attend Wedding Of Suzanne Hill

Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, wife of Senator Gerry, of Rhode Island, has come to Washington to attend the wedding on Saturday of Miss Suzanne Hill, daughter of former Representative and Mrs. John Philip Hill, to Mr. Phillips Huntington Clarke.

The wedding will be solemnized at a high mass in Baltimore at which Archbishop Curley will officiate. This will be but the fifth marriage in 20 years which he has performed. Following the wedding, there will be a breakfast at the home of the bride's parents, 3 West Franklin street, Baltimore.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

George Milholland, who has just returned from a tour of Pennsylvania, has been "best man" more than anyone else we know. It is getting so that a wedding at Fort Myer can't take place without George's aid. Yesterday he stood up with Dick Yule at his marriage to the chic Eve Jarrett which took place at noon. Almost the entire personnel of the post was crowded into the tiny brick chapel.

After the ceremony, the field officers and their families and the intimate friends of the young couple adjourned to Milholland's quarters for refreshments. Then, at the proper time, not the bride, but the bridegroom, slipped away to change his clothes. That does seem rather unusual, but you see, for the ceremony he had worn his uniform, not exactly the most comfortable attire for a lengthy motor trip, so he changed to civilian clothes, while the new Mrs. Yule, having worn a suit for the wedding, awaited him, talking and laughing with the guests. The young couple emerged from the house pelted with showers of rice and good wishes. They were put atop the tally-ho and away they went to the gate, the band blaring forth "Here Comes the Bride" and "There's Something About a Soldier."

Anne Cornelius and her uncle and aunt, Col. and Mrs. Charles H. Corlett are going to have a grand time at West Point over this wek-end. There will be the Army-Colgate game in the stadium up by Lusk Reservoir, Saturday afternoon, not to mention the hop at Cullum Hall. All of this means that little Anne has to hustle up with her studies, because she is a freshman at G. W., and is pledged to Chi Omega, and week-end visits have a way of vanquishing books and home work.

Poor Anthony Adverse is awandering! And this time not through some thousand pages, but right here in this city. Anthony, a small but independent kitty was given to Mrs. Louis Caldwell. The small mouser was taken home, and happy days loomed ahead, but that was without reckoning with the haughty Siamese pussy already ensconced in the Caldwell home. He firmly vetoed everything and so, Anthony had to start out on his own again, but with the aid of the lady of the house in finding a new home.

Catherine McKane and her mother, Mrs. Samuel McKane, are leaving today with Mr. John Richter for New York, where they will join the William B. Shearers. They will be the guests of the latters sister, Mrs. Frank Howard, for the Velvet Ball tomorrow night. Catherine returned yesterday from Milwaukee, where she bought her gown. She drove both ways and looks just as fresh as a morning glory at 6 a. m. All of this tripping around is not enough for the Western miss, for she is coming home from the metropolis Saturday in time not only for the Gay Nineties Ball Mrs. William Laird Dunlop is giving at the Mayflower that night but early enough in the afternoon to attend the wedding of Yvonne Christian and Lieut. William E. Persons. Such energy!

Several Cabinet Members Plan To Cast Their Ballots by Mail

Only Secretary and Mrs. Roper Will Not Vote, Explaining 'Two More in South Carolina Won't Make Any Difference.'

By Dudley Harmon.

Cabinet members and their wives are coming to the aid of their party with a vengeance this week. Those who are not going to their home States to vote are planning to send absentee ballots and, of course, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt will be in Hyde Park to cast theirs as they did in the last election.

The only members of the Cabinet who are not voting are the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper. "Why should we bother?" asked Mrs. Roper yesterday. "Two more Democratic votes in South Carolina won't make any difference."

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull mailed their votes yesterday to their home State of Tennessee. Mr. Hull, by the way, has somewhat of a whirlwind schedule these next few days. He left last night to speak in Detroit, and will return tomorrow just in time to leave late in the evening with Mrs. Hull for Staunton, Va., for the week-end.

Others who are doing their voting via the postman include the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson and the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace. Mr. Wallace is expected to return to the Capital Wednesday or Thursday from a speaking trip in the Middle West.

After Miss Perkins, Secretary of Labor, completes the maze of speaking engagements in which she is involved, she will go to her home in New York City to remain until after the election. She will speak in Chicago today and Allentown, Pa., tomorrow.

"Mr. Ickes will undoubtedly vote by mail or in person," said his secretary yesterday. "He is now in New Work for the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the dedication of the Statue of Liberty.

The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., are planning to leave the first of the week for their country home at Fishkill, N. Y., where they will remain until after election. The Attorney General and Mrs. Homer C. Cummings have already registered in their home town in Connecticut and after the voting is over, sometime later next month, it is possible they may "rest, relax and recuperate" in Pinehurst, N. C.

Speaking of politics—and who isn't these days—a dispatch from Boston says young Henry Cabot Lodge has a strong chance of winning there in his race for United States Senator against Gov. James Curley. Should he be victorious, he and his wife will be notable additions to the Capital's official and social life. They are both young, good looking and intelligent.

Mr. Lodge, now a member of the Massachusetts Legislature, is the grandson of the late United States Senator who fought so bitterly in postwar days against the entrance of the United States into the League of Nations. Although anti-New Deal, he has allied himself with the more liberal Republicans. Mr. Lodge is a brother of the John Lodge, of movie fame.

Society Notes

The Ambassador of France and Mme. de Laboulaye will return to Washington tonight from New York, where they attended the fiftieth anniversary of the Statue of Liberty. They will be accompanied by Mme. Jules Jusserand, widow of the former French Ambassador, who will unveil a bench in memory of the late Ambassador in Rock Creek Park.

In New York the Ambassador and Mme. de Laboulaye entertained at a dinner at the Hotel Pierre. Their guests included the French Under Secretary of State, M. Francois de Tessan, who arrived recently on the Ile de France; Count Charles de Fontnouvelle, French Consul General in New York; M. Jean Appert, Financial Attache of the French Embassy; M. Maurice Garreau-Dombasle, Commercial Attache; Mme. Appert, Mme. Garreau-Dombasle and Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Cartier.

The Minister of Ireland and Mrs. Michael MacWhite will go to New York on Tuesday, and on Wednesday evening will attend the banquet to be given at the Waldorf-Astoria by the National Horse Show Association, which is sponsoring the annual International Horse Show, opening November 4 in Madison Square Garden.

Representative and Mrs. Allen T. Treadway, of Massachusetts, observed their forty-third wedding anniversary recently at a dinner party at the Elms in Stockbridge, Mass.

Mr. Clarence Hewes entertained at a small dinner party last evening at his residence on Massachusetts avenue.

Pastor, Bride On Boat Trip

The Rev. Dr. Henry W. Snyder, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, and his bride, the former Mrs. Mabel Kunz Bodenstein, are on a wedding trip by boat to Boston. On their return they will be at home after December 1 at 5124 Chevy Chase Parkway.

Their marriage took place Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock at the church in the presence of the immediate families, with the Rev. Dr. U. S. G. Rupp, of Baltimore, lifelong friend and pastor of the bridegroom, officiating.

Mrs. G. Ellis Pendleton, daughter of the bride, acted as matron of honor, and Dr. Luther H. Snyder, son of the bridegroom, was best man. Among those present were the Misses Anne E. and Evelyn Todd Bodenstein, daughters of the bride; Messrs. William U. Snyder, of the graduate school of Duke University, and Henry W. Snyder, jr., of Gettysburg College, sons of the bridegroom; the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Kunz, of 1824 Kenyon street; Mrs. Justina U. and Miss Agnes L. Snyder, of Baltimore, mother and sister of Dr. Snyder, and Miss Viola Lehman.

Grays Entertain American Faculty

Dr. Joseph M. M. Gray, chancelor of American University and Mrs. Gray last night gave their annual reception for members of the faculty at their home on the campus. Receiving with them was Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, resident Methodist Bishop here, who was a former chancellor of the university. Assisting in the dining room were Mrs. Arthur C. Christie, wife of the president of the board of trustees; Mrs. E. S. Griffith, wife of the dean of the Graduate School, and Mrs. Emory Olsen.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For almost a year I went with a young man I have known a long time who seemed much interested in me. I am 22 and he is 27. I was his first regular girl and we had not been going together long when he told me he would like to marry me, but did not want to get married for several years—this meaning, of course, that he expected me to wait for him.

He has a good job and makes very good money. He told me he liked me more than any girl he had ever seen and I can truthfully say the same thing about him. He told me that he did not want me to have dates with anyone but him, which I didn't. Later he told me he guessed he was wrong and said if I could have a good time with other people to do so. He has given me several nice presents. He saves his money and I am convinced when he does marry that his wife will have a wonderful home.

• • • •

Several months ago he got angry with me and would not come to see me any more, his reason being that I would "not go places with him." As a matter of fact, he usually came to see me about once a week and during our courtship I don't think I refused him more than two or three times. He got mad at one of these refusals.

My home is a peculiar one. My parents are much opposed to my going out with anyone. When I do go out, I have to be home early and can't enjoy myself while I am out. That was my reason for refusing his invitation this particular time. Don't you believe he found this out and is using his anger as an alibi?

He lives in a town not far away, and almost every time I am in that town I see him. He speaks and is always very nice to me at those times, and from what I hear he has no regular girl now. Since he stopped coming I have been going with other boys and not confining myself to any certain one and I find that I can have a good time that way. He knows this. Do you think he is jealous? In what way should I proceed to get him back?

LONESOME.

Romance Has Fled.

DEAR LONESOME: It is my opinion that the young man is no longer seriously interested in you and has not been for a long time now. When he told you he had made a mistake in asking you not to go out with other young men, and suggested that you make as many friendships with men as you liked, that was a veiled way of declaring that he wished to relinquish proprietary claims on your time and affections. Observing, no doubt, that you failed to take the hint, he then proceeded to seize the first plausible opportunity for promoting a quarrel as a means of making a definite getaway.

• • • •

I do not believe your parents' attitude or your "peculiar" home life was any particular factor in bringing about his change of heart—except insofar as these things in your background may have affected your personality and made you a not very congenial companion. I think, rather, that he came simply to the conclusion that he did not love you enough to wish to marry you, and that he has since been busy trying to make you aware of his change of heart. That would explain his cheerful civility when he meets you. If he was really deeply hurt by your alleged refusal of his attentions, his reaction would be entirely different.

• • • •

If you have any chance at all of winning him back, it is by adopting an attitude of pleasant indifference to his existence, and by demonstrating great popularity with other young men. In other words, by leading him to suppose that he has presumably lost a pearl of great price.

M. H.

She Needs Hobby.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I wonder if you can help me. I am a woman of 65, a widow, with seven grown children, five of whom are married. An unmarried son and daughter live at home with me, and a married daughter lives next door. Yet I am lonesome.

• • • •

I have always been an active woman. Walking was my favorite recreation. But owing to a recent ailment, I am unable to walk much. As I live in the suburbs and am not convenient to bus or carlines and am not so fortunate as to own a car, I have to remain at home.

• • • •

I am advised not to do much reading, sewing or knitting. In fact, I seem to be left out of all activities. Yet I certainly have no intention of becoming a rocking chair invalid. I help with the household tasks; do cooking, ironing and make beds. But it is my leisure time that hangs so heavily on my hands. I get so lonely I am miserable. Can you please suggest something?

WIDOW.

Sources of Help.

DEAR WIDOW: What you must do is find some hobby—some medium of absorbing, stimulating self-expression—to occupy your leisure hours. The person who is thus occupied is seldom lonely, for he scarcely realizes that he is alone. But before one could suggest such a hobby for you—or a list of hobbies from which you might choose one or more—one would necessarily need to know what things you are physically and financially able to do that would be most interesting to you.

• • • •

Your letter has been brought to the attention of Miss Rae Lewis, a specialist in hobbies for persons of both sexes and all ages, who writes a weekly column on the subject for this newspaper. Miss Lewis says if you will write to her direct, making yourself personally known to her in order that she may discuss with you in detail your possibilities for occupational self-expression, as well as the handicaps you have to contend with, that she will be glad to see what can be worked out. Address the letter to Miss Lewis, Hobbies Editor, The Washington Post.

• • • •

Incidentally, do you happen to own a radio? If you have one of the best, through which you can tune in on programs broadcast from foreign countries as well as on those nearer home, it should be an excellent companion. Another approach to a happy solution of your problem might be through the Washington Life Adjustment Center, 1464 Columbia road, ADams 1033. Miss Beulah Smith, the director, would gladly give you an appointment for a personal interview, and might be able to give some very pertinent suggestions as to how to occupy your leisure time. Whoever gives you concrete help will need to know more about yourself and your resources than is told in the foregoing letter.

M. H.

Noted Designer Assails Style Trends

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

THE FEMININE figure still has hips—this is not a prediction, but a fact! But judging from many of the latest style trends, hips seem to have faded from the style picture entirely. There is no beauty or chic in a perfectly straight silhouette, hips should be accentuated; by fitted waistlines and gored skirts which flare.

These comments were stressed emphatically by Elizabeth Hawes, noted American designer, who is visiting Mrs. William S. Corby, of Washington, this week.

For the first time in her designing career, Miss Hawes is working with black—a color she loathes. Black, said this courageous designer, "is the most unbecoming of all colors. It ages one terribly and should be worn only by the young, or women who are beautiful enough to dominate its somberness."

Another antipathy of Miss Hawes is the shorter evening gown, which many stylists and designers, particularly those influenced by Paris, are sponsoring. Evening gowns, according to Miss Hawes, should drag on the floor—those which are shorter in the front and just touch the floor in back, she thinks, are ungainly and not at all chic. Dinner gowns, she declares, are smartest when of ankle length—no longer and certainly no shorter.

"A good dress needs no trimming," said Miss Hawes, "but should depend on line and fabric for smart effect. Color is the last consideration when I am creating a costume. A frock should be designed first and then the accessories; they are always secondary to the frock itself."

ELIZABETH HAWES.

Elizabeth Hawes from the beginning has defied current trends and has always chosen to follow her own ideas of what is smart and becoming to American women. She believes matched accessories an atrocious idea, although they have practically taken over the style scene.

"What designers and all women in general need in their wardrobes is more imagination," she said, "and the courage to wear clothes which enhance their personalities and add smartness to their appearance instead of following every whim of fashion like sheep." Miss Hawes likes the current short skirt trend—for sports clothes 13 or 14 inches from the floor and for street 10 or 12 inches, depending, of course, on the height, weight and body contour of the person.

"Suits for winter are exceptionally smart," she commented, "and it is surprising that more women do not wear them; the natural tendency is toward frocks and coats." Miss Hawes is now designing some luxurious looking suits of wool, trimmed with mink, sable and ermine. Trimming with these furs, she claims, is much more satisfactory than with long-haired varieties; they can be manipulated and used in striped and patterned effects, which lend character to the garment.

In designing fur coats, Miss Hawes prefers to combine the fur with woolen materials; it makes them fit the figure better. Fitted coats are much more flattering to the figure than the swagger types, she thinks. In planning any type of costume she prefers to work with soft fabrics which can be manipulated easily. "Stiff fabrics are a menace to designing," concluded Miss Hawes. "They are difficult to create with and certainly do nothing at all for the feminine silhouette."

For her own wardrobe Miss Hawes wears a lot of tweeds—the less tailored types made with full skirts, fitted waistlines and short jackets. For evening, the robe d'style formal gowns. But always, daytime or evening, she must have color; bright hues and rich, subdued tones of brilliant shades—never black or pastel tints.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Oct. 28.

VICTORIA, Duchess of Toledo and unhorsed Queen of Spain, sailed away from us the other day on the Queen Mary, after a stay of over a month, and though the reason for her visit was grim enough, I have an idea she had a very pleasant time indeed during her local visit.

ALICE HUGHES.

She came, of course, to sit at the bedside of her first-born, once Prince of the Asturias but now the Count of Covadonga, a title which might have been thought up by E. Phillips Oppenheim. The minute he saw his mama he seemed to perk up, which allowed Victoria to get about town a lot in the company of her daughter, now the Princess Alessandro Torlonia. New Yorkers seemed to get a great belt out of having royalty stopping on Park avenue, and citizens used to stop and peer intently at the very ordinary-looking apartment pueblo where she found refuge. A couple of everyday coppers at the door gave it sort of an official look—though they might well have been standing guard over a raided gambling house.

She went to the theater, she shopped at our glossy salons on Fifty-seventh street, she even found time to have a look at Niagara Falls, and one of her chief regrets was that she couldn't do the same for the Grand Canyon. And when eight huge bluecoats had escorted her safely to her suite on the colossal Cunarder, a spokesman gave out the expected statement that Victoria had a hunch that her younger son, Juan, would some day sit on the throne of Aragon and Castile. The Spanish Bourbons probably do not have to worry about ham and cabbage a plenty, for it is well known that Alfonso cached a large sum of mad-money in foreign capitals. Haemophilia is, however, enough grief and woe for one family.

GIRLS ABOUT TOWN—Politically-minded ladies here are going about town with corrugated brows since they learned that only 85 women are galloping for office this fall, as against 97 two years ago. "Whither are we slipping?" one skirted district leader asked me the other day, but I hurried right along to a style parade. How should I know? . . .

Pause to shed a tear for those hectored souls whose lives are spent in thinking up new names for perfumes. It must be worse than naming race horses or Pullmans. These people have recently come up with a new one—"Devilry." One whiff of that and anything goes . . .

Our latest little group is "The Sunday Afternoon Driving Club," formed either in enthusiasm or desperation by a group of well-known business girls, including Mary Lewis, Dorothy Smith, Josette De Lima and Virginia Shook. They hire a few of the remaining horse-drawn victorias which cluster around the Plaza Hotel and clop-clop down Fifth avenue to the dear old Brevoort for tea. Some fun, hey kids? . . .

Romantic rumors have suddenly burst forth concerning the bereft Louise Van Alen Mdivani, who spent her Newport summer mourning the loss of her polo-playing husband. The gent mentioned is Henry Phelps, the good-looking fellow once married to Muriel Vanderbilt . . .

I've been brooding for the past few days over the Kingston, Ontario, man who was accused by his wife of being a chocolate bar fiend. A nonsmoker and a teetotaler, he can't overcome his craving for goodies, and hides them behind the barn so he doesn't have to share them with his wife. I'm telling all those of my friends who are married to rumpots about him—just to let them know how other women suffer! . . .

Mothers Urged To Keep Babies Quiet at Home

Needless Wheeling About in Go Cart Cited As Harming Child.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

YOUNG BABIES should be kept quiet. They do not need change or excitement, but thrive best on what would seem to adults a very monotonous way of life. When Mrs. X takes the baby out in his carriage she is doing it for her own amusement, though she claims that it is for the baby's benefit.

The baby would be just as well off in the backyard or on the porch or even sleeping in his crib at an open window where the sun can reach him—and in some cases would be far better off.

A baby does not get exercise when he is out in his carriage. All he needs is fresh air and sunlight, and if he can get these at home there is no need for his being pushed about crowded streets where he is surrounded by moving vehicles, strange faces, and all kinds of disturbing noises and queer smells.

The world is new to a baby. He has any amount of special investigations to make before he needs to learn what is beyond his crib. After he has learned something about the objects which he can see from where he is lying, he must learn it all over again from a sitting position.

Then he must make experiments in standing, creeping, walking; examine the house he lives in, the trees, grass and flowers of his yard. He will lie for hours watching the waving branches change the pattern of the sky. He is too busy to be bored. Faces, noises, fast-moving objects confuse and tire him. He does not enjoy being talked to and at by strangers. And when strangers do bother him, the child becomes nervous and irritable.

It is the mother whose vanity is being vicariously satisfied. The baby is indifferent or bored, but she is all smiles. It is the mother who wants change when she risks the baby's nerves wheeling him about in a carriage when he could be at home.

Graceful Legs A Requirement Of New Styles

Proper Exercise and Massage, Also Dancing, Will Improve Contour.

By Carolyn Abbott.

WE ARE showing our legs this season.

Designers maintain that feminine legs are beautiful and they design cleverly so that we may show off our underpinnings. We are at their mercy.

Because of all this we must all have lovely legs if we have no choice but to show them. Exercising will help to develop shapely legs.

To develop your calves so that they will blend gradually into your slender ankles, go into a few little dance steps as often during the day as the spirit moves you. This will strengthen and lengthen your muscles. If you do not dance, walk around your bedroom for a few minutes each evening with marbles clenched in your toes. This will not only build up your arches but will also tighten up the muscles of your legs.

If you think your legs are hopelessly slim, massage them with olive oil in a constant upward movement from the ankles.

Parisian designers could not make a go of short evening skirts, so they dropped back down to floor length. However, many of the long, fitted skirts are slit from the knee to the hem, plainly showing the legs when in motion. Full evening skirts are cleverly made of transparent material such as chiffon and lace, thus revealing the legs.

All sorts of things are being done to attract the eye to the legs. Designers are showing hose in colors for contrast, and lacy hose with a delicate tracery of gold. We seldom see stockingless legs.

A black dress recently designed by Orry Kelly for Ruby Keeler shows a wide loose panel in front which is lined in chartreuse so that there is the merest glimpse of color with the switch of the skirt. Another gown had the split of the skirt outlined with brilliant clips so that it immediately became the cynosure of all eyes.

Put ¾ cup brown sugar and 2 tablespoons butter in top of double boiler, stir over the fire and boil 1 minute. Add 2 cups milk and ¼ cup cracker crumbs. Put over hot water until sugar melts. Beat 3 egg yolks slightly with ½ teaspoon salt and add hot milk slowly, stirring constantly. Turn into buttered pudding dish or individual mold, set in pan of hot water on several thicknesses of paper and bake at 350 F. until a knife thrust into the center comes out clean. Beat 2 egg whites until stiff and beat in gradually 5 tablespoons sugar and ¼ teaspoon vanilla. Shape with pastry bag and star tube or spread roughly on pudding and bake 20 minutes at 300 F.

Window Shades Put 'Eyes' Before World

Your window shades are the eyes of your home. How well they tell your neighbors just what type of person you are. Keep the eyes of your home sparkling, fresh and clean by buying first quality cloth window shades of firm, fine fabric processed with oil paint.

Good cloth window shades last five years and longer, they stand up under rain and moisture without crinkling, and they diffuse light, which is so especially important for the bedrooms.

You can order shades in lovely colors and in delicate tones of gray and circassion brown.

Afghan Crocheting New Fad; Various Scraps May Be Used

By Alice Brooks.

CROCHETING afghans is the rage now—come and join the fun! You'll love this one—it's made of scraps—each square a different jeweled bit of color. And if it's something smaller that you want make a pillow or a crib cover in pastel colors. You'll have an heirloom that will do justice to your skill as a needlewoman. In pattern 5696 you will find directions for making the afghan; an illustration of it and of the stitches used; material requirements, and color suggestions.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. 14th Street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

When the Gall Bladder Misbehaves.

There is scarcely a middle-aged person who has not had some feeling of discomfort in the region of the gall bladder. This is true particularly of the individual who is a "good feeder" and who exercises but little. Every now and then we see a chap who is fat and 40 who will subconsciously give himself an occasional dig (massage) in this area.

the gall bladder. This is true paroffshoot from the main outward bound channel of the liver, holds just enough bile in its reservoir to start the process of digestion. As soon as the liver supply becomes adequate the flow from this source ceases.

Because of the close connection between this structure and the ducts of the liver, inflammation can reach the pouch either by traveling along the tubes or via the blood. As a result we may find a greatly enlarged, pear shaped bladder filled with mucus, pus or stones.

The most common difficulty is that which is characterized by inflammation—cholecystitis—which is rarely confined to the gall bladder alone. It is due to an infection, and the liver channels are nearly always involved. If the irritation is extensive the liver itself will be included.

If anything has occurred that interferes with the normal behavior of the gall pouch there is a feeling of fullness after eating, sometimes nausea and vomiting, loss of appetite and a distinct dislike for fatty foods. The diagnosis is not difficult, as tenderness is easily detected. In addition, by means of the injection of a special dye, an X-ray outline of the region may be obtained. If there is enlargement or greatly thickened walls the condition can be determined accurately.

Stones are found often without evidence of inflammation. In such cases they are usually of the cholesterol type, which means that this particular chemical, which occurs in fat and fatty foods, has existed in too high a concentration in the blood and, therefore, has been precipitated.

Those who have a tendency to gall bladder trouble should adopt a cholesterol-free diet. This means the omission of all animal fats, as well as such foods as liver, kidneys, sweetbreads, egg yolk, cream, etc. A large number of patients will be relieved by this plan alone. Overeating should be avoided and those who are overweight should make a decided effort to bring the avoirdupois within the range of the average. High vitamin feeding has been advocated, particularly vitamins A and C, and this may bet accomplished through the use of green vegetables, carrots, milk, tomatoes, lemons and oranges.

Surgery is a recourse that is always available and may be required in the presence of stones or of chronic infection. The operative attack on this part of the body has reached a high standard of excellence.

Neutral Group Rejects Protest Of Spain, Soviet

By the United Press.

London, Oct. 28.—A battle royal between Soviet Russia and the bloc of Fascist states in the Spanish nonintervention committee was climaxed tonight when the members officially rejected Spain's and Russia's charge that Italy and Portugal had aided the Spanish rebels.

Moreover, in secret session it was learned the Italian delegate, Ambassador Dino Grandi, roundly upbraided Russia for its "ambiguous attitude" which, he said, had nearly wrecked the work of the committee and heightened the Spanish civil strife.

Earlier, Ambassador Ivan Maisky, of Russia, had published a scathing reply to a Portuguese note accusing Russia of fomenting the Spanish revolution. Italy had brought 20 new specific charges against Moscow, citing dates and places, where Russia allegedly had supplied arms to the loyalists.

Seldom in an international gathering has bitter feeling run so high. It appeared that the battlefield of the Spanish war had been transferred from Madrid to London.

Findings of the committee were summarized in an official communique which also revealed the intensity of the verbal battle which had raged in the foreign office meeting chamber all evening.

Earlier Maisky had informed the committee his government respected the terms of the non-intervention pact, but did not consider itself bound to observe it if the Fascist states did not. And all the world, he added, knew that they were not doing so.

Edith Maxwell Confers With Attorney

Inclosed find ..... as a contribution to the Edith Maxwell Defense Fund to be used by The Washington Post in her retrial.

ADDRESS .....

Edith Maxwell Repeats Story To Her Lawyer

Killing of Father Outlined to Smith; Defense Fund Grows.

With her second trial less than three weeks away, Edith Maxwell, 22-year-old Lonesome Pine girl, late yesterday held a lengthy conference with Charles Henry Smith, eminent attorney, of Alexandria, Va. He will defend her at Wise, Va., when she again is arraigned for the "slipper murder" of Trigg Maxwell, her father.

She told how she returned late on the night of July 21, 1935, to her home in the Cumberland Mountains; how her father, apparently drunk, jumped out of bed and began chasing her; how he threatened to kill her with a butcher knife, stripped her clothes from her and knocked her over a chair, and how, finally, in a desperate attempt to ward him off, she struck him on the head with a slipper.

She told of rushing out in the night, wandering around scantily clad for a few minutes and then returning to the house to find her father apparently none the worse for the slipper blow. She told how he went back to bed, got up an hour later and collapsed. She told how she ran out and got the doctor who was to pronounce her father dead.

Sentence Reversed.

It was the same story that Edith told at her first trial at Wise last November, a trial which ended in her being found guilty of first-degree murder and being sentenced to 25 years in the State penitentiary.

Readers of The Washington Post bombarded the editor with letters protesting against that harsh sentence. The Post decided to accept contributions to finance a fight for a new trial, and at its invitation Attorney Smith agreed to lead that fight.

The case was carried to the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, which recently held that the verdict of first-degree murder, with its 25-year penalty, was not justified by the evidence. A new trial was ordered, and it was for this that Miss Maxwell and Attorney Smith prepared yesterday. It is scheduled to start November 16.

With the $1,000 originally contributed by Post readers almost exhausted in the fight for a new trial, a new fund is being collected for the expenses of this trial.

Fund Near $300 Mark.

This new fund is now headed for the $300 mark, which, though a heartening sum, is short of the amount that will be required to meet the cost of stenographic transcripts, travel expenses for defense witnesses, the gathering of affidavits and other items involved in an important criminal trial.

Contributions reported yesterday follow:

Mrs. J. C. Harvestran	$2.50
Mrs. E. J. Harwood	1.00
A. Reader	2.00
Another Friend	1.00
Mr. and Mrs. G. H.	5.00
Yesterday's total	$11.50
Previously reported	$263.00
Total	$274.50

Miss Maxwell, whose career as a school teacher in the mountains was blasted by her father's death, last night returned to the farm near Richmond, where she, her mother, her brother and two little sisters now are living. For 14 months after her father's death, Edith was in jail. She was released in $6,000 bond recently.

3 Impresarios Sent To Prison for Waste

Moscow, Oct. 28 (AP).—Three executives who "went Hollywood" in Russia were sentenced to labor camps today.

The men, former executives of the Eastern Film Trust, were convicted of frittering away state money for the production of movies.

The manager was sentenced to serve four years, the director, two years, and a bookkeeper, one.

The accused men were charged with purchasing a bad scenario, countenancing excessive production expense, and with wasting money searching for talent.

During their trial it was testified that out of 40 employes of the movie company, 2 were Trotskyites, 6 thieves, 1 a murderer and 2 embezzlers.

Fascists Urge Belgium to Cut Link to League

Nationalists Also Demand Step in Dispute Over Neutrality.

By the Associated Press.

Brussels, Oct. 28.—Belgian Fascists and Flemish Nationalists, opponents of Premier Paul van Zeeland's government, demanded tonight that Belgium announce its withdrawal from the League of Nations.

Their proposal came after a speech by Foreign Minister Paul Henry Spaak which those groups contended was a recession from a strong "neutrality" policy recently pronounced by King Leopold.

Spaak described Belgium's new foreign policy as "complete independence without returning to our prewar foundation of complete neutrality." It could not be adhered to, he asserted, unless Parliament provided extraordinary appropriations for military expenses.

The Rexists, a Fascist organization headed by Leon Degrelle, called the "Hitler of Belgium," and the Flemish Nationalists, whose sympathies are strongly pro-German, declared Spaak had backtracked on the King's statement that the nation should refrain from collective security and the army should be reorganized only for protecting Belgium from invaders.

"Was the King made to speak in order to say nothing, or was he deliberately misled?" asked one Flemish deputy in the Chamber debate.

Belgium, Spaak said, will inform both Germany and France, her neighbors, that she will not harbor the army of either side for an attack on the other.

"Our policy," he declared, "is not a return to neutrality, but to be completely independent according to our geography, history and tradition. * * *

Housewife Is Held On Check Charges

Two charges of false representation were lodged against a 25-year-old mother of four children yesterday in connection with several bad checks allegedly passed in local department stores.

The woman, Mrs. Ivy Williams, was arrested at her home, 813 East Capitol street, early yesterday by detectives of the headquarters check squad. She is being held at the Woman's Bureau while her children are being cared for at home by a maid.

According to Detective Sergts. Chester Stepp and Herbert Wanamaker, complaints were received from several department stores about checks for small amounts bearing Mrs. Williams' name, which have been returned by the bank marked "insufficient funds."

Detectives said Mrs. Williams admits writing the checks but said she did not realize the seriousness of the offense and intended for her husband to pay the bills when the stores complained. Her husband, George Williams, is a salesman for a cooking utensil firm.

Workman's Death Is Held Accidental

A verdict of accidental death was handed down by a coroner's jury yesterday after an inquest into the cave-in at the District sewage disposal plant which killed Orestes Patrick Burke, 34, of 3338 Prospect avenue northwest.

The jury held the death accidental, "due to an error in judgment on the part of employes in and around the ditch."

Burke and another employe, Charles West, 27, of 326 Raleigh place southeast, were buried under several tons of earth October 20 when the sides of a sewer excavation gave way. Burke died a short time after he was admitted to Providence Hospital. West was not injured seriously.

According to testimony submitted to the jury the men were installing pipe lines in the ditch. Witnesses said the walls of the hole were not braced properly, causing the cave-in.

Cicily Brown made her entrance into the employe ranks of Washington's N. B. C. offices in a big way this week. Cicily had just been appointed night hostess at WRC and had hardly learned her way about the studios when Shannon Allen, night boss in Washington, received an SOS from Constitution Hall. Fritz Kreisler was to be late for his concert and some one was needed to fill in—to entertain the audience assembled.

Allen promptly settled down on Miss Brown who is only a hostess at night. In the daytime she attends Peabody Institute of Music in Baltimore and is recognized as an excellent pianist.

Cicily accepted the commission and hied off to Constitution Hall where she contributed 20 minutes of Chopin's Fantasie Impromptu in C Sharp Minor and Chopin's Etude in C Minor.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Howard F. Wentworth.
Diarying for Samuel Lubell.

Growing.

The National Federation of Federal Employes, outgrowth of a Government workers' confab 'way back in 1917, is out to establish a membership of 1,000 local unions and 100,000 individual members by this time next year.

And, according to Gertrude M. McNally, present secretary-treasurer, it looks like they'll do it. Anyway, we'll know when the Twentieth Jubilee Convention opens in Springfield next fall. Incidentally, great plans are under way for this affair. It promises to be one grand birthday party.

Here's a bit of surprising information snatched from the afternoon mail: All three of the prize winners in the National Statue of Liberty Essay Contest—who wrote "What the Statue of Liberty Means to the American People"—hail from West of the Mississippi River and probably never saw Lady Liberty! But the first award winner, a 17-year-old Colorado high schol girl, will get a glimpse of her when she collects her prize—a trip to Europe.

Statistics.

The Department of Agriculture press service came through with a few startling statistics yesterday. It was pointed out—for some reason or other—that a cow drinks 10 gallons of water daily. To arrive at this figure, statisticians took 200 head of cattle and found that within five months they drank 325,850 gallons of water.

All this figuring was done to prove that cattle-watering ponds must have adequate depth to withstand droughts. First, investigators had to discover how much water each cow drinks in order to find how much water disappears by evaporation. We doff our hat to these Department of Agriculture mathematicians.

But looking to the lighter side of Agriculture's activities, we find 50 members of the choral society in feverish rehearsal for a "gay 90's" musical production scheduled for November 12 in the auditorium. Director Robert Frederick Freund is laboring long and hard to whip the show into final shape.

From all indications, it will be quite an affair. Every member of the able chorus (their reputation is city-wide) will be garbed in costumes of grandmother's era. The general public is invited. Admission will be free. And don't forget, Victor Neal will be at the piano with renditions of old-time Bowery songs.

Applications for the position of aircraft mechanic (motors) at the Norfolk Navy Yard, Portsmouth, will be received by the yard's recorder of the Labor Board up until November 3, it was announced yesterday. Applicants must have at least four years of shop experience with combustion engines. Full information is available at the Civil Service Commission, Seventh and F streets northwest.

Reclassification of salaries and employes in the project control division, WPA, has met with opposition. Workers are opposed to reclassification of salaries in the lower bracket—$2,000 or under. They want an order rescinding all pay cuts until an investigation of reclassification plans is completed. But, according to reports, the entire WPA set-up is soon to be effected by reclassification.

Hoover DeniesAids Listed CarNumbers

Reports that some of his agents had obtained license numbers of District automobiles parked at a recent Communist rally in Baltimore were denied yesterday by J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

His denial followed an inquiry to determine if someone had impersonated his men.

At the same time Baltimore police were reported to have announced after an independent investigation that the numbers were obtained by W. J. Cruickshank, described as an investigator of the Customs Service.

Officials of the Treasury Department, which has supervision of the Customs Service, asserted last night there is a customs agent of that name in Baltimore, but denied he had been authorized to make any such investigation.

Drive to Find Jobs for D. C. Youth Begun

Program of Y. M. C. A., Other Groups Offers Extensive Aid.

A comprehensive program to aid the youth of Washington, between the ages of 18 and 25, to obtain work has been launched by the Young Men's Christian Association, in co-operation with other organizations, it was announced yesterday.

Under a system to be known as "Planned Guidance Program for Youth," there will be an extensive hook-up to aid youth along many lines, with jobs as the goal. Co-operating with the Y. M. C. A. in this work are the public schools, the District National Youth Administration, the Junior Placement Service, the Young Women's Christian Association, the Rotary Club and the Kiwanis Club.

Weekly lectures will be given by experts in the vocational and professional field. Counselors are to be provided to help youth select vocations or professions they want to follow. Where a youth already has chosen his work, a counselor will be provided to discuss with him the kind of education needed.

Committee to Aid.

As a further effort to aid youths to obtain jobs, a special cimmittee will be named to talk to employers, with a view to getting their co-operation.

As a preliminary to the guidance program, William Loman, director of research for the Hecht Co. and professor of psychology at George Washington University, addressed a group of youths at the Y. M. C. A. Building Tuesday night. His subject was "The Purpose of Guidance, the Attitude of Individuals in Seeking Employment and the Employers' Reaction to the Attitude of Applacants for Positions."

The next lecture will be delivered next Tuesday night by J. C. Godwin, assistant controller of Woodward & Lothrop. His subject will be "Occupational Requirements of Clerical Workers Using Office Machines."

Those to Serve.

The planning committee, the main unit in the guidance program is composed of Prof. J. Orin Powers, former assistant educational director at George Washington University, chairman; E. A. Drum, of the Y. M. C. A., organizer and secretary of the committee; Miss Marguerite Wykoff, director of junior placement, District of Columbia Public Employment Servide; Miss Francoise Black, director of National Youth Administration in the District; Dr. H. S. Hoffman, chairman of the Kiwanis Club guidance committee; Henry W. Fisher, jr., member of the Rotary Club boys work committee; F. G. Macarow, director of personnel for Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.; Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent of public schools; Miss Jessie Coupe, assistant principal of McKinley High School; Mrs. Irving Ketchum, executive director of education for the Y. W. C. A., and Prof. Loman.

Death of Roomer Blamed on Injury

Meanwhile, police are holding two men and a woman for investigation in connection with the mysterious death. They are Garland B. Johnson, 34, Thomas' roommate, Lewis N. Harris, 76, a nightwatchman, and Mrs. Lillian L. Pauley, 39. All live at the Sixth street address.

Detective Sergts. Jerry Flaherty and William Liverman, investigating the case, said they have been unable to determine whether Thomas struck his head in a fall while drinking, or whether he was beaten in a drunken brawl. The police said roomers in the house heard an argument in Thomas' room earlier in the day. Several empty liquor bottles were found in the room.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said an inquest will be held. No date has been set for the hearing.

250 Buses to Get New Ventilators by Sunday

Buses operated by the Capital Transit Co. will be equipped with ventilating apparatus in accordance with an order of the Public Utilities Commission by Sunday, William B. Bennett, assistant to the president, said yesterday.

The equipment has been purchased at a cost of $25,000 and will be installed on 250 buses. A few old buses, soon to be retired from service, have been exempted from the order.

Civic Unit Told Crime Collects But Never Pays

Hepbron Says Thieves Cost Taxpayers 13 Billions Each Year.

"Crime doesn't pay. It collects."

With that phrase, James M. Hepbron, director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, last night summed up the profession of crime in this country—a profession, which, he said, was responsible for an annual bill to the taxpayer of from $13,000,000,000 to $17,000,000,000. He was speaking at the Jewish Community Center.

Hepbron ridiculed attempts to explain the prevalence of crime in the United States as due to our heterogeneous population, to glandular disorder or to psychoses.

The real reason, he said, was the lax administration of justice and the facts that the sympathies of the public are often on the side of the wrongdoer.

Although he made it clear that he believed their work could be of some value, Hepbron brought heavy verbal guns to bear on the psychiatrists, saying that their ranks were filled with "crack-pots," who should be eliminated.

He said that criminals go through the same mental processes as the ordinary citizen and, in many instances, are more intelligent than their guards. Education, he said, was no deterrent to crime.

As a program for lessening the extent of crime, Hepbron urged the speeding up of the processes of justice and the removal from public office of "political hacks and dimwits."

Young G. O. P.Club Is Organized Here

Meeting last night at Republican headquarters, 1413 H street northwest, approximately 60 men and women organized the Young Republican Club of the District, and elected Albert E. Conradis president.

Other officers for the infant organization included Malcolm Sharpe, first vice president; Mrs. Bishop Hill, second vice president; Mrs. Louse Hunter Snow, treasurer, and William H. Mondell and Mrs. Cooper Rhodes, national committeemen.

Formation of the group was at the suggestion of James C. Wilkes, chairman of the Republican committee in and for the District. Speakers were Paul E. Lesh, president of the Landox-Knox Campaign Club, and E. F. Colladay, national committeeman.

D. C. Arrests for Year Involve 8 Parole Cases

Out of a total of 5,269 arrests made for criminal offenses in the District during the fiscal year 1935-36, only eight local parolees were involved, according to the annual report of the District Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole, released yesterday.

Two of the eight parolees rearrested were charged with joyriding, one with housebreaking, one with robbery and four with miscellaneous offenses.

Bobby Allen, Victim of Traffic, Mourns Spoiled Halloween Plan

Halloween hobgoblins and witches on broomsticks; grinning jack-o-lanterns and ghostly figures; gayly colored costumes and masks that enhance the make-believe for one glorious celebration each year—these are some of the things small boys in Washington are eagerly anticipating Saturday night.

But among the throng of merry-makers who will thread the streets on Halloween, one brown-eyed boy with golden glints in his brown hair will be missing. Robert Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Allen, of 4317 Georgia avenue, will neither be on the streets nor at a party on the night when his playmates are having so much fun.

In Children's Hospital, his broken leg in a cast, Bobby lies today with one hand fingering a box of colored pencils, the other turning the pages of a crayon coloring book. The pictures amuse him. Looking at them he forgets for a while the good times he will miss in the next six weeks.

But on Saturday night when all the pictures have been looked at and most of them colored, Bobby will hear echoes of laughter from the streets, and then he will remember, and wish . . . that he could be out there with the other boys and girls along with the "witches," "black cats" and "devils" that make up the playful pageant . . . that he hadn't been coasting along on his bicycle in the path of the taxicab that hit him on Monday night . . . that he could wake up and know that the sound of screaming brakes, the plunge to the street, the broken leg and the hospital bed were all parts of a dream . . . that he could be back in his own home with his two older brothers and his sister.

He will think, too, about those good times planned for Thanksgiving and Christmas. Less than a month until Turkey Day. Less than two months until Santa Claus comes, and there he lies with a broken leg, a bruised upper lip and skinned places on both arms.

But maybe by Christmas he will be up and around. The bruises on face and arms will be gone by then, Bobby believes. The cast may be off by then, too, and he can take part in the festivities that delight childish hearts more than any other the year around. But the weeks just before Christmas go slowly enough even for the boys who can walk and play and ride their bicycles.

Presbyterians Give Welcome To New Pastor

The Rev. Thomas Law Coyle, young Presbyterian minister, was given charge of the Sherwood Presbyterian Church parish at installation ceremonies last night in the church at Twenty-second street and Rhode Island avenue northeast.

High officials in the Washington City Presbytery took part in the service, and a large number of church members were present to welcome their new pastor and to give him a reception afterward.

The Rev. Fred A. Kullmar, moderator of the Washington Presbytery, gave the invocation, and Dr. Bernard Braskamp, pastor of Gunton Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church, preached the sermon. The Rev. D. Hobart Evans, pastor of the Hyattsville Presbyterian Church, read the Scriptures and prayer was offered by the Rev. Robert M. Skinner, pastor of Georgetown Presbyterian Church.

The moderator announced the installation, after which Dr. John C. Palmer, pastor of Washington Heights Presbyterian Church, gave the charge to the pastor. The Rev. Alexander T. Coyle, pastor of Cottage City Presbyterian Church, and brother of the new Sherwood pastor, gave the charge to the congregation. Dr. Freeley Rohrer, pastor of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, offered the installation prayer. The new pastor said benediction.

Judge Orders Warrants Out For Hoeppels

Official, Son Convicted in West Point Plot, to Be Arrested.

Bench warrants for the immediate arrest of Representative John H. Hoepple, of California, and his son, Charles J. Hoepple, both of whom were convicted in District Court of having conspired to sell an appointment to West Point, were issued yesterday by Justice Peyton Gordon after both had sought to gain a postponement of the beginning of their sentences so they could wind up business affairs in California.

Justice Gordon was informed by the Hoeppels' bondsman that he had been informed they would like to return here November 3. Justice Gordon insisted upon immediate imposition of sentence and indicated he would order forfeiture of the bonds of $2,000 unless the pair was brought in forthwith.

He insisted that as a condition to nonforfeiture, the bondsman should agree that the prisoners be brought here from California at the bondsman's expense, under custody of a California deputy marshal. That was agreed upon.

The Hoeppels were convicted of attempting to obtain $1,000 from Charles Ives, Baltimore, Md., athlete, who was formerly an Olympic star, to obtain for him an appointment to the Military Academy. Ives testified he gave a note for $1,000, but never had paid anything on it.

Sentence of from four months to one year was imposed on the father and son after they had been found guilty by a jury in District Court, Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue was the trial judge.

Capitol 'Guarded' As Result of Theft Of Senator's Razor

The mysterious disappearance of a Senatorial razor, some cough medicine and other small articles resulted yesterday in unusual precautions by Capitol police to prevent further losses.

So, for the first time since the Bonus Army riots of 1932, only one entrance to the building will be open after 4 p. m. Strangers will not be admitted after this time, Thomas L. Younger, custodian, announced.

The missing razor belongs to Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi. He usually kept it in his office and missed it when he sought to get a "between trains" shave, officials said.

Although the custodian said only trivial losses had been reported, others asserted typewriters and some valuable office equipment had disappeared.

Dismissal of 2 Officers Urged By Trial Board

Recommendations for the dismissal of two policemen from the Metropolitan force were sent to the Commissioners yesterday as a result of a police trial board meeting Tuesday.

The board recommended that Privates Lonnie Thompson, of the Sixth Precinct, and A. B. Cole, of the Third Precinct, be removed and further recommended Precinct Detective R. J. Maghan, of the Third Precinct, be fined $50.

Cole and Maghan have been under suspension since October 2, when Capt. Arthur Miller, of the Third Precinct, complained to Police Headquarters. In a report, Capt. Miller charged Cole with having taken three packages of clothing—property returns from larcenies—from the Third Precinct Station and put them in his car parked in the rear of the station.

When questioned, Miller said, Cole stated Maghan gave him permission to take the articles. Cole was found guilty and ordered dismissed. Maghan was found guilty in part and the fine recommended.

Private Thompkins was found guilty on three charges of having failed to communicate with the Sixth Precinct Station while he was patroling his beat.

The board convicted Policeman K. H. Davis, of the Seventh Precinct, on a charge of failing to patrol his beat continuously. The board warned him.

Bone Dry Zone Near Hospitals Here Proposed

The Alcohol Beverage Control Board will consider proposing a general regulation prohibiting the sale of liquor in the immediate vicinity of all hospitals, public or private, as the result of a controversy over issuance of a license to a store near Walter Reed Hospital.

George W. Offutt, chairman of the board, announced yesterday that he had invited representatives of all hospitals in the District to a public meeting sometime next week for the purpose of considering the matter.

This announcement followed action of the A. B. C. Board on Tuesday issuing a class A permit over the objections of officers of Walter Reed Hospital, after Harry H. Woodring, Secretary of War, had advised the board to disregard them and to act as it would in the case of any public institution.

Offutt said that if the majority of the hospital spokesmen desire it he will recommend to the District Commissioners that they adopt a regulation barring liquor stores within a specified number of feet from hospitals.

Dairy Plans Conference On Milk Price

Although 14-cent milk yesterday appeared to be a certainty after November 1, following AAA approval of an increase to producers, Washington dairies maintained discreet silence on their plans.

It was learned that Highland Farms Dairy, which retails milk through High ice cream stores at 10 cents a quart compared to 13 cents obtained by its competitors, will confer with its producers to determine whether the increase will have to be passed on to consumers.

"If the added cost is relatively small," said Philip Rosenfeld, attorney for Highland Farms, "our 10-cent price probably will remain. If it amounts to a sizable sum, an increase may be necessary.

Pays Producers Same.

"It has always been the policy of Highland Farms to pay its producers the same for milk as they can get elsewhere and in a majority of instances more than they can get elsewhere. We will continue to pay our farmers at least the equivalent of what the others get."

An amendment to the Federal marketing agreement tentatively approved Tuesday by Acting Secretary of Agriculture Willis R. Gregg, who is chief of the Weather Bureau, provides that the minimum price paid by handlers to producers for Grade I milk shall be increased from $2.62 to $3.24 per hundredweight, beginning November 1 and continuing through April 30, 1937.

Highest Quality.

"The Bureau of Food Inspection," he said, "has made the milk supply of Washington of the highest quality as compared with other cities. This has proved beneficial to the milk industry as well as to the public."

Last year, he reported, the bacterial count of milk sold locally was 3,000, compared to 12,000 in 1930. In this five-year period the infant mortality rate fell from 71 to 60 deaths per 1,000 live births. In 1935 the percentage of pasteurized milk was 99.99, compared to 99 in 1930.

"It would doubtless be unwarranted to state that all of the lives saved during this period," Dr. Seckinger asserted, "was due directly to our greatly improved milk supply, because a number of agencies are working toward this end, but it is believed that without a safe milk supply infant deaths would still be much higher than they are at present."

Yacht Club Boys Provide Sure-Fire Hit in Film; Success Formula Discovered—a Song in Blizzard

Songsters Turn Perennial Sophomores Who Yodel Their Way to Fame for 'Dear Old Texas State;' Judy Garland, Screen Newcomer, Adds Her Bit to Melody and Scenery in Hliarious Film Due at Capitol.

BELL.

As a matter of fact, hinterland reports to the contrary nitwithstanding, these Yacht Club Boys are a panic throughout the length of the picture. They are cast as the Texas State University nitwits who have been sophomores for 14 years and plan to spend the remainder of their lives trying to graduate. Their songs, scattered through the action with more or less logical excuse, the nature of the story being what it is, are, as usual, complete musical narratives with lyrics that Gilbert and Sullivan might have envied. They even sing their celebrated "Woo-Woo" number, with the night club lyrics slightly renovated since the last time I heard them in the boys' suite at the Washington during their last visit to the Capital as headliners at the Earle. What a song!

But they do not capture all of the singing honors. There is a new youngster in this subject by the name of Judy Garland—at least she is new to these eager eyes and ears—who gets away with two songs right in succession. They may originally have been separated, but the vagaries of the cutting room have brought them right smack together in the finished edition of the picture. But Miss Garland is not hard to take and two songs in a row fail completely to irk an audience. That is to say, they failed utterly to annoy yesterday afternoon's audience of drama desks assembled for the good of their dispositions in the private projection room at the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange. The boys and girls, with Gene Ford and Eddy Gilmore as added starters, ate the whole hilarious business up and banged on the table with their spoons for more.

Outside reports have been more or less to the effect that this gav charade started out with a grand story idea which was permitted to languish by the wayside until nothing of it was left by the time the last reel of the picture had been reached. This is a gross and malicious falsification. "Pigskin Parade" does start out with a very elegant idea and it winds up with that idea wholly and completely intact.

There are several of us in town who are still waiting for the picture in which the Yacht Club Boys will sing "The Great American Tourist," "The Nudist Colony" and "The Very Remarkable Mr. Green," if any. The lyrics might have to be scrubbed up a little in spots, but the basic humor of the numbers is so authentic that they all three deserve to be heard. If they can use "Woo-Woo" with Will H. Hays' approval—and there is no reason for him to disapprove—they could use the others.

Walter Abel has been engaged for the leading male role with Katharine Cornell in Maxwell Anderson's new play of "The Wingless Victory," which will have its premiere in this city later in the season, according to present plans. This announcement was made on behalf of Miss Cornell yesterday by Ray Henderson, distinguished mouthpiece for her and Guthrie McClintic.

To accept this flattering assignment, it has been necessary for Mr. Abel to obtain leave of absence from the RKO-Radio studios to which he is under contract for pictures. He has just completed "The Green Light" and previously has been in such productions as "The Three Musketeers," "The Lady Consents," with Ann Harding, and "Fury," with Spencer Tracy and Sylvia Sidney.

Walter Abel was leading juvenile with the Jessie Bonstelle stock company in Detroit when Miss Cornell was leading woman and Guthrie McClintic was assistant stage director. "The Wingless Victory" brings them together again for the first time since their early days in the Michigan metropolis.

Barbara Fulton, who was Little Eva in Rebecca Talwater's version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," presented last year at the King-Smith Playhouse, is a member of the cast of "Plumes in the Dust," the Arthur Hopkins production in which Henry Hull is starring this week at the National. She appears in the role of Rosalie Poe. Miss Fulton is a graduate of the King-Smith School and played last summer with the Barter Theater in Abingdon, Va. Her ability as an actress first came to light when she took the part of Lily in "Hotel Universe," directed by William Whitehead at King-Smith.

One of yesterday afternoon's welcome callers at the drama desk was Dick Maney, most facile of the theater's contemporary publicists, who was making his second visit to the Capital—he left town last night to return Monday—by way of avant courtiering Noel Coward's unique, running barrage of playlets to be presented over a fortnight in the National Theater, beginning Monday, November 9, under the title of "Tonight at 8:30."

Mr. Maney reports an enthusiastic reception of the latest Coward contribution to the theater in Boston, where he and Gertrude Lawrence were roundly applauded for the cleverness of their work in nine short plays by Mr. Coward.

This novel idea represents a theatrical innovation hardly second to Eugene O'Neill's blasting of precedent with "Strange Interlude" and "Mourning Becomes Electra," which began in the afternoon and ran through the evening, with dinner intermissions interpolated for the succor of the starving. Mr. Coward doesn't go quite that far, but he does offer three new playlets three times in his first week and then repeats the same succession in the second week.

Score Heavily in "Pigskin" Hit

Midsummer Night's Dream Due For Popular-Price Run Here

Max Reinhardt's picturization for the Warner Brothers of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" will be presented for the first time in Washington at popular prices at the Metropolitan Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. In this mammoth and highly colored film version of the Bard's most engaging fantasy, practically all the stars on the Warner lot appear—Olivia de Havilland, Anita Louise, Dick Powell, Ross Alexander, Joe E. Brown, James Cagney, Hugh Herbert, Frank McHugh, Ian Hunter, Mickey Rooney, Veree Teasdale, Jean Muir, Victor Jory, Robert Cavanagh and hundreds more. This is one of the notable productions of the modern cinema.

"The Big Broadcast of 1937," featuring Jack Benny, Burns and Allen, Ray Milland, Shirley Ross, Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Leopold Stokowski and his symphony orchestra, Benny Goodman and his Swing Band, Benny Fields and a host of others, will continue on the screen at Loew's Palace for a second week, beginning today. Short-reel subjects and Metrotone News are added attractions.

The French version of Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables," with Harry Baur in the role of Jean Valjean, continues at the Belasco Theater as a road-show offering playing only two peerformances, at 2:30 and 8:30 p. m. daily. All seats are reserved for this engagement.

Having recently enjoyed a single week's engagement on the screen at Loew's Palace, Shirley Temple in "Dimples" moves down the street to Loew's Columbia for the week beginning today. In this subject the tiny star is supported by Frank Morgan, Helen Westley, Robert Kent and numerous others, including Stepin Fetchit. Short reels added.

Beginning today at the Rialto Theater, the major film feature will be a revival of "Morocco," in which Marlene Dietrich made her American debut, supported by Gary Cooper. The film was directed by Josef von Sternberg and is highly picturesque. "Three Little Pigs," Walt Disney's classic cartoon comedy is being brought back as a companion feature.

For the week beginning today, the Little Theater is reviving "The Constant Nymph," featuring Brian Aherne and Victoria Hopper, young British actress. The companion attraction will be Charlie Chaplin's two-reel comedy of "The Adventurer," a relic of the old silent days.

Beginning tonight, with projections at 7:47 and 9:47, the chief feature of the screen bill at the RKO-Keith Theater will be "A Woman Rebels," in which the stellar role is played by Katharine Hepburn, supported by Herbert Marshall, Lucille Watson, Van Heflin, Donald Crisp, Elizabeth Allan, Doris Dudley and David Manners. The story is one of English life in the mid-Victorian era and affords Miss Hepburn one of the best roles she has had in recent months. Short-reel subjects and Pathe News will complete the bill.

Next week, beginning with the customary Sunday matinee, the offering at the Gayety Theater will be "The Panther Girl," not a motion picture, but a sensational dance novelty. The comedy of the new burlesque production will be entrusted to Jack Diamond, known as "The King of Floogle Street."

'Ethan Frome' Will Vie With Ace Film Hits

Beginning next Monday night and continuing throughout the week, with the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees, Max Gordon will present Pauline Lord in "Ethan Frome," at the National Theater, with Earl Larimore as the featured player in the title role. Eddith Wharton's novel has been adapted to the stage by Owen Davis and his son Donald, whose dramatizations of "Icebound," "The Good Earth" and other stage stories are memorable. Miss Lord's portrayal of the neurotic hypochondriac, Zenobia, has been widely lauded. Mr. Larimore appears in the role created in New York by Raymond Massey. A strong cast has been assembled, in line with the Max Gordon tradition, for the enactment of the suporting roles. Seats go on sale at the box office today.

Marion Davies and Clark Gable are the costars of "Cain and Mabel," the new first National release which will be seen as the inaugural attraction at the Warner Brothers' new Uptown Theater tonight and will open a week's engagement as chief screen feature at the Earle Theater tomorrow. The suporting cast in this musical comedy in celluloid includes Roscoe Karns, Walter Catlett, Davis Carlyle, Hobart Cavanaugh, Ruth Donnelly, Pert Kelton and Joseph Crehan. On the stage at the Earle, the new week's bill will be headlined by Don Bestor and his orchestra, one of the Nation's favorite bands. "Ducky" Yontz and Neil Buckley are among the featured entertainers with the Bestor crew. Other acts will be presented by Eddie White, the singing monologist, and Allen and Kent, dancers.

"Pigskin Parade," one of the liveliest and most original football musical comedies the screen has revealed, will be the major attraction at Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The foremost roles are taken by Stuart Erwin, Patsy Kelly, Jack Haley, Betty Grable, Johnny Downs, Dixie Dunbar, Arline Judge and the Yacht Club Boys. The stage bill will be headlined by rotund Johnny Perkins, a Capital favorite. In his support will be Elaine Arden, Martha Mears, Anderson and Allen; Pete, Peaches and Duke and the Pichhiano Troupe. The Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's music will round out the program.

Tomorrow and Saturday nights, to comply with last week's overwhelming demand for seats, the newly organized Washington Civic Theater will repeat its "Caesar and Cleopatra" in the Wardman Park Theater. This has been hailed as the finest production ever offered by any resident group of players. This week there will be no Saturday matinee.

The Post's New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons.

It Happens Here.

The authors, scripters and set designers of "It Can't Happen Here" waged verbal battle all day with Thomas Adrian Cracraft, shouting at Sinclair Lewis, who yelled at Harry Flanagan, who returned in kind to both. Each has threatened to yank his name from the credit-mentions list. The play, incidentally, is a plea for tolerance and co-operation . . . A national magazine is having labor trouble. A walkout of employes is expected any day . . . Time lists Beatrice Lillie as a member of one of the Presidential campaign committees. Miss Lillie can't vote. She's an alien . . . The Ruth Bickford who sang with the St. Cecilia Choral Society at Carnegie last week really is a night club songstress who uses another name . . . Mr. Simpson isn't keeping silent. His intimates, in letter to friends here, quote him as stating: "I am sorry that I have only one wife to give to my king."

• • • •

Vivienne LaFone, the English showgirl at the French Casino and niece of the Earl of Lytton, and who garnered reams of publicity after hiring herself a press agent, is being snubbed by the rest of the London ladies in the show. They say her actions are un-British!

• • • •

Vinton Freedley, producer of "Red, Hot and Blue" which opens tonight, called in Wilkie Mahoney, Ben Bernie's gag writer, to touch up the comedy lines. "I need a punch-line for this duck routine Durante is doing," Freedley confessed . . . Mahoney observed the scene—wherein Durante fires a gun, and five minutes later a duck falls—one of the oldest of burlesque routines: "Well," Freedley asked, "can you think of an appropriate punch-line?" . . . "Sure," Mahoney matched, "there's only one possible line—'My God, my wife!' "

Three pulp magazines are raiding the city desks for talent. The magazines will go slickpaper, and the new policy will be to use no contributions adhering strictly to the writing-staff policy . . . The Mary Lewis premiere at the Versailles already has been sold out. Jimmy Walker will attend—his first opening since he quit the Mayoralty . . . Mae West will do a comedy skit for her appearance at the Paramount. It's entitled "Thumbs West."

Benny Fields entertained the Democratic National Committee the other day. Fields' routine includes the song, "Broadway Rhythm," in which he mentions the columnists' names. Benny thought he flattered the Washingtonians when he substituted and sang it, "Farley, Morgenthau, Tugwell, Ickes — Yeah, they got Broadway Rhythm!"

Sam Lyons, the agent, and Col. Moe Snyder made a bet in Lindy's last night—over which one of them has more Personality . . . Ben Estreicher, doorman at Dave's, was hired recently as chauffeur to Harry Richman. Every debt due him from his former position has been paid up, except two bucks owed him by John Barrymore . . . Saturday night a reunion was supposed to be held at the French Casino by Monte Proser, Abe Bronson, Sammy Gold, Harold Scadron and a barbershop bootblack. It was to commemorate the first anniversary of their lucky escape, when the Dutch Schultz outbreak a year ago resulted in a gun battle in the Broadway barbershop while they all were present. Each of the celebrants Saturday did what they should have done a year ago—stayed away. None of them showed up.

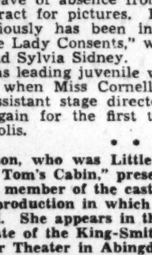
Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Warner Brothers studio is expanding so rapidly that even the efficiency man cannot say how many stages there are. Each new stage is heralded by the press department as "the biggest ever erected!" A few weeks ago the "biggest" was the size of an airplane hangar. The one just completed is "bigger than Madison Square Garden."



PAT O'BRIEN.

"But you haven't seen anything yet!" exclaimed Jack Warner when we met on the lot. "Our next will be so big we can film outdoor battlefield scenes indoors."

• • • •

I suggested that such a stage would be ideal in which to congregate conceited stars. They could sputter and blow about themselves to their heart's content, and nobody would hear them.

• • • •

On the "Ready, Willing and Able" set, Ross Alexander was singing a love song to Ruby Keeler. This sounds like easy money, but Ross' new wife, Anne Nagel, was on the set and—well, I guess it is embarrassing to sing a love song to one woman while your wife-of-a-few-weeks looks on. So Alexander's voice was rather weak, which will make a difference in the finished film, because another voice will dub the song.

• • • •

Pro Net Tour Awaits Perry Acceptance

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 28.—Whether there'll be a profitable organized tour of tennis professionals this winter depends on Fred Perry and he doesn't know.

Bill O'Brien, the former rub-down expert, who put the pro game on a paying basis, will wash his hands of the sport unless Perry accepts a two-year-old flat offer of $50,000.

"The games needs someone who can stand across the net and give Ellsworth Vines a battle," declared O'Brien, who said he lost around $22,000 exploiting last year's troupe, "and Perry's the man. I'm through making overtures to him. He's got to come to me now."

Perry stirred up a great deal of speculation in 1934 when he first received O'Brien's offer. It was a tempting opportunity to turn his amateur glory into gold. One day he thought he would accept; the next day he was sure he wouldn't.

"The whole thing was terribly botched up," said Perry. "I suppose I contributed to the messy state of affairs. My friends and advisers were divided on my taking the professional step. So I didn't know what to do and, consequently, nothing was done."

O'Brien isn't the only promoter in the field for Perry's services. The latest is Mike Jacobs, who entered the bidding today. Mike announced he would split $15,000 between Perry and Vines in the Hippodrome.

"That's all very interesting," Perry remarked, "and quite tempting for one exhibition, but the hitch in the thing is that 'Elly' is in Tokyo and probably won't return for some time.

"Let's get this whole business straightened out. I honestly and frankly can't say what I am going to do, whether I'll turn professional or remain an amateur. As a matter of fact the entire matter is out of my hands. This time I'm not talking."

"Does that mean you've left it to your attorney?" He was asked.

"I'm sorry, but I can't say," he replied. "You see, as I said before, the question of my future was botched up previously. This time I'm going to be discreet about it. I probably shall make a definite decision, one way or the other, by the end of the year. In fact I will have to."

St. John's Squad Ends Holiday With Practice

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 28 (AP).—The St. John's College football squad went through its first practice today since Friday when Valentine (Dutch) Lentz, head coach, gave the players a holiday.

Preakness, but was nosed out in the Baltimore stake by Cavalcade's stablemate, High Quest, ridden by Bobby Jones. It was generally believed at the time that Jones had disobeyed orders from his stable owner to allow Garner to win the Preakness on Cavalcade.

Garner resigned from the stables of Mrs. Isabelle Dodge Sloane in 1934. At that time he expressed a desire to become a trainer, saying that "20 years in the saddle is a long time." He was unable to gratify his desire, however, and continued to boot home winners.

Garner's father and his four brothers were all outstanding riders in their time. Like them, starting to make his name in the West, Mack moved East about 12 years ago, and after that rode for such big stables as those of J. E. Widener and Peter Coyne as well as Mrs. Sloane. Willie Garner, also widely known as a jockey, is a nephew of the deceased.

Two Spiders Hurt, Out of V. P. I. Game

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 28.—Two more casualties were reported as Richmond's Spiders took the practice field today.

Dr. Cullen Pitt, university physician, said injuries to both legs would keep Bobby Vaughan, halfback, out of the V. P. I. game this week at Blacksburg, and Jack Kennedy, sophomore back, showed up with a "Charley horse" that may keep him on the sidelines.

A. B. Marchant, injured in last week's game with V. M. I., was not expected to be in condition for the Tech encounter.

Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite stressed pass defense in a scrimmage with the freshmen. After a light workout tomorrow the squad will entrain Friday for Blacksburg.

Middleburg Hunt Ends Cub Season

Middleburg, Va., Oct. 28.—A swift chase of 40 minutes after a speedy red fox on the coldest October morning since 1917 ended the cubbing season for the Middleburg Hunt today.

The opening meet will be held Saturday at Benton estate of D. C. Sands, M. F. H. Hounds will be cast on the Sands' lawn at 9 o'clock.

The field gathered this morning at 7:30 o'clock at Hickory Grove in a killing frost that gave the appearance of a light snow. A fox was started 20 minutes after the hounds were cast and after the run, was lost near Bull Run Mountains. The riders were Mr. Sands and Miss Noland, joint masters; Miss Eleanor Mackubin, Miss Laura Sprague, Miss T. B. Davis and Mrs. W. P. Hulbert and Mrs. Amory Perkins.

Brand New Rassle Clean-up Begun by N. Y. Commission

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 28.—The first step in a brand-new campaign to "clean up wrestling" was taken by the New York State Athletic Commission today.

Calling in every matchmaker in the city, the commission laid down the law respecting loose methods, then showed it means business by clapping a $1,000 fine on one club for rule infractions.

This club, the Coliseum, admitted it advertised a card featuring Ed (Strangler) Lewis recently, then substituted a wrestler for Lewis without notifying the public.

Bill Harkin, Coliseum matchmaker, said he guessed his press agent forgot to inform the newspapers of the change.

"Neither will I," agreed Chairman John J. Phelan. "We'll get to the bottom of it."

"Wrestling is being conducted too loosely," went on Phelan. "We are told wrestlers are made to sign blank contracts. Often they do not know who they are going to wrestle or how much they are to get until they reach the arena.

"One man told us he seldom knew what he was to receive until after the bout. He said his money had to be cleared through the office doing his booking."

The commission then passed a rule compelling matchmakers to have every man advertised on their cards appear before the commission at 1 p. m. on the day of the show.

Commissioner Brown seemed interested in ascertaining if the matchmakers did their booking through Jake Pfeffer, who is in the bad graces of the commission.

It developed that most of the local pachyderms are booked through rival groups controlled by the Dusek and Garibaldi brothers.

Sweeps Race Is Taken by Dan Bulger

By the Associated Press.

Newmarket, England, Oct. 28.—Stepping to the front 50 yards from home, Sir Abe Bailey's Dan Bulger scored a popular victory in the ninety-seventh running of the Cambridgeshire Stakes today after a nervous crowd had watched outsiders make the running for the greater part of the mile and one-eighth journey.

The victory, scored by two lengths over Sir George Bullough's Daytona, was doubly popular, for Dan Bulger was by far the heaviest backed horse in the field of 22 at 7 to 1 and earned Sir Abe his third Cambridgeshire triumph. Third place went to M. H. Benson's Laureat II, which missed runner-up honors by a head.

Dan Bulger's triumph was a blow at the bookmakers for upwards of $25,000,000 had been wagered on the race with the greater part on Sir Abe's 3-year-old son of Bulger. More than $8,000,000 was distributed in the Irish Sweepstakes, with holders of tickets on the winner receiving $150,000 each.

Two American-owned horses, A. K. Macomber's Tempest 2d and Mrs. Chester Beatty's Hypothesis, were in the race, but only Tempest 2d was prominent in the running after the early stages. He finished fifth, as Dan Bulger was clocked in 1:51 3-5 under 111 pounds.

Madigan Threat Reveals Gaels Insolvent

By the United Press.

Chicago, Oct. 28.—Edward P. (Slip) Madigan, athletic director and head coach at St. Mary's College, threatened today to resign if a committee of San Francisco bankers forecloses on the college and "appoints an efficiency expert to give orders in the athletic department."

Word of the committee's foreclosure plans in behalf of first mortgage bondholders came as Madigan groomed the galloping Gaels for the second major intersectional football game within a week. St Mary's meets undefeated Marquette, finest nonconference team in the Middle West, at Soldier Field Friday night.

"St. Mary's isn't bankrupt," Madigan said. "We're just property poor. In 1928 we mortgaged all the school's property, including some 500 acres in five parcels around Oakland and San Francisco, to build some fine new buildings.

"Came the depression and we couldn't meet redemption or interest payments. If they foreclose, I'll still stay on unless the committee takes away my powers in athletics," he said.

Despite injuries received Saturday while losing, 7 to 6, to Fordham, the Gaels likely will be favored to whip Marquette Friday night. Even if Madigan is forced to rely on eleven "iron men" he has picked to stand up against the crack Milwaukee team, he still may have enough power to win.

2 Devitt Stars Are Out For Mt. St. Mary's Today

Since both boys were of the all-star variety on their high school teams last year, the prep boys go into the game seriously handicapped. Cattell, a Filipino boy who has been doing great work recently, will replace Bones.

Colonials Get Big Sendoff For Rice

By Shirley Povich.

Sports Editor of The Post.

En Route to Texas, Oct. 28.—George Washington University's Colonials are rolling through Virginia and Tennessee tonight, en route to the Rice game at Houston Saturday, with the confidence of the student body dinned into their ears.

Shouting down the memory of that 41-0 debacle against Rice at Griffith Stadium last year, G. W. U. students and bandsmen staged a thunderous demonstration at Union Station as the unbeaten Colonials departed for the most important game on their schedule.

Amid organized cheering, the tooting of the school band and the songs of the G. W. U. Glee Club, the squad and coaches took their leave for the Southwest, grimness written on the expressions of all.

At St. Louis tomorrow afternoon the squad will stop for five hours and a workout, arriving at Houston on Friday afternoon when it will stage its final drill before the game.

Rice Favored.

Armed with advance information about the Rice team, gleaned by his scouts who have seen Rice in action three times this season, Pixlee is prepared for a battle of wide-open offensives. His defense will concentrate on stopping one Jake Scheuhle, who has supplanted Jim Wallace as the star of the Rice backfield.

Scheuhle, the most favored versatile of the Rice backs, is the best kicker on the squad as well as the best ball-carrier and runs from punt formation, according to Pixlee's advices. Thus Pixlee believes the burden of the defense will fall upon his secondaries.

Rice will enter the game the heavy favorite as a result of the comparative records of the two teams this season. Despite the fact that G. W., tied only by Mississippi, is unbeaten, Rice's record is superior. The Owls held the powerful Louisiana State team to 6-0, held Duquesne, Pitt's conqueror to 14-0; and defeated Georgia and Texas.

Pixlee, now definitely committed to his spectacular spread formation, is relying on the speed and shifty running of Joey Kaufman and Vic Sampson to carry the offensive burden.

Gophers, Pitt in Grid 'Naturals' This Week

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Oct. 28.—College football's schedule makers may have had some "feed box" information when they drew up the 1936 lists.

Considering that this part of the job is done at least one and generally two years in advance, they could hardly have done better, from the standpoint of national championship interest, if they had been calling their shots.

All the Nation's current top-ranking teams, paced by Minnesota, are certain to be well tested by "naturals" on the remaining half of the championship season.

It seems the only mistake this week was in not scheduling the battle between Minnesota and Northwestern for Soldier Field, instead of Dyche Stadium in suburban Chicago. The peak of interest aroused by the Wildcat challenge to the Gopher victory march is such that t likely would have been no task at all to interest more than 100,000 fans to buy tickets to see it.

From the outset Minnesota's campaign has been calculated to remove the slightest doubt of the Gopher bid for national honors. The opening victim, Washington, now is rated tops on the Pacific Coast. Nebraska, beaten only by a last-minute touchdown thriller, is the class of the Big Six. If the Minnesotans hurdle this week's formidable obstacle, as a majority expect, they still have two more Big Ten tests, with Iowa and Wisconsin, in addition to a match with the University of Texas, one of the leading Southwest Conference powers.

Pittsburgh, No. 2 club on the current big league ranking list, moves this Saturday against the unbeaten Fordham Rams, probably as tough a defensive outfit as in the country. Two weeks later, assuming the Panthers indulge in no more tailspins in the meantime, they play a decisive engagement with Nebraska at Lincoln.

The main argument on the West Coast figures to be settled November 14 when Southern California's Trojans invade the home grounds of Washington's huskies.

The South will have to wait until November 28, when Tulane tackles Louisiana State at Baton Rouge, before making any final awards. This match, incidentally, may have a distinct bearing on Rose Bowl or Sugar Bowl invitations, or both.

Here are the principal games affecting the sectional or national title situation, so far as the "top flight" is concerned:

November 14—Texas vs. Minnesota, at Minneapolis; Pittsburgh vs. Nebraska, at Lincoln; Southern California vs. Washington, at Seattle; Yale vs. Princeton, at Princeton; Auburn vs. Louisiana State, at Birmingham.

Chicago's Track Ace Quits School To Study, Think

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 28.—Ray Ellinwood, brilliant University of Chicago middle distance runner, has put footracing aside to devote several years to study of famous philosophers at a secluded spot in California, it was learned today.

To the astonishment of Coach Ned Merrian and felow students, Ellinwood, who performed sensationally in the quarter and half-mile runs last spring, left yesterday with a fraternity brother, Leonard Olsen, for California in a 7-year-old automobile. They plan to study the writings of St. Thomas for two years, with mathematics and natural sciences as sidelines. A third year will be devoted to study of Aquinas' works with respect to modern philosophers.

The withdrawal of Ellinwood virtually wrecks Chicago's hopes for accomplishing anything in Big Ten competition. As a sophomore last season, Ellinwood, a tall, deep-chested youngster from River Forest, Ill., won the conference indoor quarter mile in 48.9 seconds, the best mark on record. Earlier in a dual meet with Notre Dame, he sped over the distance in 49 seconds. He was undefeated in Big Ten competition, but faded at the close of the season, failing in the Princeton Invitational and National Collegiate A. A. meets.

A brilliant student, Ellinwood has maintained an exceptional scholastic average, although he seldom attended classes. The cabin in which he and Olsen will reside is located north of Pasadena.

Brownell, Pitt Meet For Manor Crown

Bobby Brownell, 17-year-old holder of the District and District junior golf championships, qualifier for the National Amateur, will attempt to land another title Sunday when he meets Harry (The Moose) Pitt in the finals of the Manor Club championship.

Pitt, who has won the Manor crown some five times, is defending titleholder. The 18-hole battle will start at 1 p. m.

The Mid-Atlantic Association of Greenkeepers will hold its monthly meeting next Monday at Rodgers Forge Golf Club, Towson, Md., starting at 1 p. m. A tournament also is on the menu.

Risko Outslugs Harry Balsamo In Upset

By the United Press.

New York, Oct. 28.—In a primitive pier 6 slugging match, handsome Babe Risko, former middleweight champion, tonight scored a stunning upset victory by winning a 10-round decision over Harry (Slambango) Balsamo, New York's sensational knockout artist.

More than 5,000 fans in the Hippodrome saw rugged Risko win the unanimous decision that tagged Balsamo with his first defeat after 20 straight victories that included 16 knockouts.

Risko Disdainful.

The curly haired, statuesque Risko showed positive disdain for the deadly right hand of Slambango, who had been hailed by many of the experts as "the new Ketchell." Only once in the bout was the lad who lost the 160-pound crown to Freddie Steel last summer in any great danger.

That was in the fourth session that saw Balsamo take the lone knockdown of the bout. Midway in that slugging session, Balsamo drove the Babe toward a corner, feinted to the body and then nailed the former sailor boy on the chin so hard with a right that Risko staggered back into the ropes. His mouthpiece went flying onto the ring apron. Risko was groggy, but experience came to his rescue and he dove into a clinch, holding on desperately until his head cleared.

In the 10-round semi-final Chino Alvarez, highly touted Tampa lightweight, proved a distinct disappointment when beaten easily by Norment Quarles, of Hendersonville, N. C.

Jimmy Braddock Signs For a Bout in Havana

New York, Oct. 28 (U.P.).—Jimmy Braddock, world heavyweight champion, will fight an exhibition in Havana during the Cuban national sports festival, promoters of the venture announced today.

Narragansett Victor Pays $25.20

By the Associated Press.

Pawtucket, R. I., Oct. 28.—Long-striding Pompoon, the 2-year-old champion which is being groomed for the Kentucky Derby, found the mile and 70 yards route just a bit too long today and he bowed to Reaping Reward, the slick brown colt from Mrs. Ethel V. Mar's Milky Way Farm, by almost a half-length in the New England Futurity at Narragansett Park.

Although champions seldom run to form in New England, the crowd of 18,000 made Pompoon a 1-4 favorite before it saw his impressive sweep into the lead at the half-mile pole, which he held to the stretch, where he faltered as Reaping Reward, off last in the seven-horse field, burst ahead to capture the $36,850 slice of the rich purse.

Smartly Handled.

Reaping Reward, son of Sickle and Dustwhirl, was smartly handled by Charlie Stevenson, who did not put on the pressure until they reached the half-mile pole. The Mars colt was flying when he thundered into the stretch and he was clocked in 1:41 3-5, just a second behind the world record at the wire.

Twenty lengths behind the beaten favorite came C. T. Grayson's Ocean Roll, which had four lengths on Mrs. L. H. Ward's Prince Sador. Dogaway, another Milky Way colt, was fifth; the Lone Star Stable's Jewell Dorsett was sixth and W. H. Gallagher's early footed Rudie trailed the field.

The upset victor's mutuel prices were $25.20, $3.30 and $2.40. Pompoon paid $2.30 and $2.20, and Ocean Roll's show price was $2.60.

It was Reaping Reward's fourth victory in 14 starts. His three previous triumphs totaled only $9,975. The setback prevented Pompoon, who had earned $78,420 by finishing first six times and second once in his other starts, from surpassing Granville as the season's top money winner.

Most of the day's favorites suffered the same fate as Pompoon. Long shots romped home in the first two races, C. S. Madison's James N. and Gallagher's Queen Vic, to boost the daily double payoff to $1,145.50 for 17 lucky players. The mutuel "handle" for the eight-race card was $474,697.

Navy's Lineup Is Announced For Penn

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 28.—The lineup of the Navy team which will meet Pennsylvania in Philadelphia was announced today, subject to the judgment of Head Coach Tom Hamilton, who may decide upon some last minute changes or start a "shock troop" eleven for a brief period.

There is no change in the backfield which has won its place as the first-string quartet since early in the season. Frank Case will call signals and Sneed Schmidt, Bill Ingram or Bob Antrim may be called upon to carry the ball, while all four may have a part in the pass plays.

Petard Pays $10.30 in Third Race; Shyno Is Worth $11.50.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 28.—Warrior Queen, a daughter of American Flag and running in the black and yellow silks of the Glen Riddle Farm, took a photographic decision from J. B. J. Townsend's Alexandrine in a blanket finish that saw Dizzy Dame third and Bad Dreams fourth. Warrior Queen, capably handled by Jockey Charlie Kurtsinger, paid a $6.70 mutuel while running the 6 furlongs in 1:13 3-5. The race, named the Queenstown Purse, was the feature of an ordinary program.

Warrior Queen was away in the first flight, but did not become a serious factor until the field swung into the stretch. Alexandrine had trouble shaking off Broad Ripple and Happy Dinah. The two fought it out doggedly to the wire with first one and then the other having the advantage. Dizzy Dame and Bad Dreams came from far back to finish with rushes in the middle of the track. In a few more jumps the winner would have been one of the two.

Perfect racing conditions prevailed and a crowd of 8,000 was in attendance.

Mrs. W. R. Mizell's Shyno, one that has been quitting after showing high early speed, forgot to stop today and, aided by a poor ride given Canpra, accounted for the major end of the purse in the opening event on today's program. A dozen cheap and slow platers marched postward and Shyno hopped to the front at the break and stayed there, leading Canpra by a neck. Third money went to Justa Flight. Shyno paid an $11.50 mutuel and was clocked in 1:47 2-5 for the mile and a sixteenth.

E. R. Bradley's Brooklyn, a $4.30 favorite, was the winner of the Corsica Purse, the day's second event, which proved a rough-and-tumble affair involving five juveniles. Brooklyn, running in very green fashion, swerved between horses going to the first turn, took the lead and then swerved out during the late stretch run. Tattered finished second, but was disqualified. In making a rush in the early stretch, Tattered bumped Uneasy and then, in turn, met interference from Brooklyn. The officials moved Uneasy into second money and Mr. Canron took the third end of the purse. Brooklyn ran the mile in 1:39 1-5.

Petard Takes Third.

Petard, ridden by Apprentice Jockey P. McDermott, won the third race by a length from Pepper Patch, the favorite, with Miss Tiptoe third in the field of a dozen ordinary claimers going a mile and a sixteenth. Petard came from out of the pack in the stretch to win going away. The gelding, owned by Frank Hayes, paid a $10.30 mutuel and was clocked in 1:47 2-5.

Mrs. Emil Denemark's Grand Duke, one that has been showing dull form, suddenly decided to run today and romped off with the fifth race to the tune of a $77.10 mutuel. The Stimulus gelding had a length advantage over Lovely Girl at the end of the 6 furlongs, with Finisher a half length farther back. Grand Duke brought another winner to Jockey Kurtsinger and was clocked in 1:12 2-5.

Merrywood, half of the Leo J. Marks entry, accounted for the winner's share of the sixth race, coming with a rush under a drive to take a half-length decision from the King Ranch's Which Print, one that set the pace most of the way. Bold Pirate was third in the field of seven competing over the mile and 70 yards course. Merrywood stepped the distance in 1:45 2-5 and brought a $6.90 mutuel to backers of the entry.

Horse Sale to Precede Middleburg Race Meet

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHYNO, $11.50, $6.10, $4.30; CANPRA, $4.10, $2.80; JUSTA FLIGHT, $5.20.

SHYNO, first away, opened a good lead on the backstretch, saved ground at the turns, but was tiring at the end and just lasted. CANPRA, off poorly, was steered wide for racing room and closed with a belated rush as if much the best. JUSTA FLIGHT, close to the leaders from the beginning, sailed gradually in the stretch after having no mishaps. MARK ME tired after chasing the pace most of the way. BELLEEK went evenly, but was held safe. BERRY PATCH dropped back after a half. RUDENIA could not keep up. The others were outrun.

SECOND RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,100. The Corsica. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:11½. Off at 2:13. Winner, E. R. Bradley's b. c. †Second, but was disqualified.
Two-dollar mutuels paid—BROOKLYN, $4.30, $2.80, $2.50; UNEASY, $3.30, $2.40; MR. CANRON, $3.40.

BROOKLYN, racing greenly, weaved at the first turn, came up on the inside of UNEASY to take command, bore out inside the sixteenth pole and lasted to the end. TATTERED, outrun to the backstretch, went up on the outside to gain contention, bumped UNEASY midway of the stretch, for which he was disqualified and suffered slight interference from BROOKLYN nearing the finish. MR. CANRON was hard ridden throughout and dropped back after the opening quarter. MISS EYE had early speed.

THIRD RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:44½. Off at 2:48. Winner, F. Hayes' b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PETARD, $10.30, $3.60, $3.20; PEPPER PATCH, $2.50, $2.50; MISS TIPTOE, $7.10.

PETARD, within striking distance of the leaders from the start, came with a rush in the stretch to be drawing out at the finish. PEPPER PATCH, chased the pace of SIR ROSE and took command nearing the stretch, continued willingly, but could not resist the winner. MISS TIPTOE came on the inside to reach the leaders and closed courageously. SIR ROSE set a brisk pace and save ground, but tired. STROPHE closed a gap in the final quarter. TIANA went evenly. PREDALAV stopped after a half. ENERGETIC LADY broke down.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,100. The Queenstown. For 2-year-old fillies. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:15½. Off at 3:17½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WARRIOR QUEEN, $6.70, $4.20, $3.30; ALEXANDRINE, $7.40, $5.20; DIZZY DAME, $5.30.

WARRIOR QUEEN came through on the inside to reach the leaders entering the stretch and wore down ALEXANDRINE to barely win under energetic handline. ALEXANDRINE, a forward factor from the start, disposed of BROAD RIPPLE and HAPPY DINAH and fought it out willingly to the end. DIZZY DAME, forced wide for racing room, came with a belated rush in the middle of the track. BAD DREAMS came from far back to close resolutely. AERO sailed gradually. FLEETING MOON dropped back. HAPPY DINAH, away slowly, was rushed around horses to take a brief lead and tired.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:48. Off at 3:50½. Winner, Mrs. E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GRAND DUKE, $77.10, $24.60, $13.70; LOVELY GIRL, $10.40, $6.30; FINISHER, $5.40.

GRAND DUKE, off alertly, and hard ridden throughout, shook off repeated challenges from SUN ANTIOCH to draw clear in the stretch and held LOVELY GIRL safe. The latter, slow to get under way, improved her position sharply entering the stretch and finished with good speed. FINISHER closed gamely. SUN ANTIOCH tired from running with the winner. SARACEN raced on the inside throughout. SOUTHERN WAY dropped out of it in the stretch. DANCING DOLL was off poorly and would not extend herself. WISE SISTER showed a dull effort.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:21. Off at 4:24½. Winner, L. J. Marks' br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MERRY MOOD (entry), $6.90, $3.70, $2.60; WHICH PRINT, $3.60, $2.60; BOLD PIRATE, $3.10.

MERRY MOOD, under stout restraint while placed close to the pace, rallied sharply when placed to drive to take command and kept going away at the end. WHICH PRINT sprinted to the front at once, was steadied until entering the stretch and closed willingly, but unable to resist the winner. BOLD PIRATE was gaining gradually in the stretch run. HIGH VELOCITY closed some ground in the closing quarter. MARFEU was taken back to allow stablemate racing room. MAEBOB was pulled up at the break, went up on the outside and then dropped back.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:49. Off at 4:53. Winner, H. J. Bundscho's b. g. (4), by Whiskalong—Panella. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:48 1-5, 1:13 4-5, 1:39 4-5, 1:47 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PANALONG, $31.90, $12.80, $5.80; GOOD FLAVOR, $23.60, $9.60; LIGHT BROOK, $5.30.

PANALONG went to the outside for racing room entering the stretch and came with a powerful rush to be up in the concluding strides. GOOD FLAVOR, sent to the front at once and then steadied along, finished gamely. LIGHT BROOK came through on the inside entering the stretch, took a brief lead between calls and fought it out courageously. DARK WINTER moved up menacingly on the outside along the backstretch, but bung in the final drive. QUIET PLEASE was never a factor. KIEVSON was squeezed back nearing the far turn. CANTINE LASS bled during the running and was pulled up.

Marion Brown Wins Medal in Beaver Dam Invitation Golf Play

By Dave Herman.

More honors were heaped on Marion Brown yesterday when the 18-year-old Manor Club champion won the medal prize with an 88 in the annual Beaver Dam Country Club invitation golf tournament.

Already having won medals in at least five women's tournaments this season, the Manor Miss covered each nine of the long and hazardous par 72 Beaver Dam course in 44 to pace a field of 74 starters.

Despite a seven and five sixes, Miss Brown racked up enough pars to offset some unsteady shooting on these six holes, and became the only golfer in the field to break 90. A cold wind swept the course, and the scores were abnormally high.

Mrs. Towle Wins.

Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Indian Spring, District and Maryland champion, finished three shots behind Miss Brown, her 44-47—91 tying her with Mrs. C. E. Purdy, Beaver Dam golf champion, who had exactly the same nine-hole rounds.

An outsider, Mrs. F. W. Towle, of Congressional Country Club, who never before had won a thing in a District tournament, carried off the chief low net prize by virtue of her 49-51—100-23—77.

Miss Mary Minnix, Columbia, 52—53—105—23—82; Mrs. Max Taylor, Manor, 53—48—101—18—83; Mrs. K. S. Giles, Indian Spring, 45—47—92—7—85; Mrs. W. P. Henderson, Beaver Dam, 54—62—116—31—85; Mrs. Herb Lacey, Manor, 61—58—119—34—85, and Mrs. R. Lacey, Columbia, 51—52—103—18—85.

Mrs. Meckley Gets Prize.

Mrs. Meckley won a prize for having the lowest score for the first nine, and Mrs. C. P. Medley, of Manor, with 47, had the lowest for the second nine.

Mrs. Herman Stabler, of Columbia, had the fewest putts for 18 holes—29. Putting winner for the first nine was Mrs. J. P. Hopper, of Columbia, who had 14; for the second nine, Mrs. Algie S. Gardiner, Columbia, and Mrs. W. D. Vogel, of Indian Spring, with 15 each, tied for the prize.

Mrs. Agnes Bowden, of Congressional, mother of Mrs. Roland Mackenzie, had the best score for three par holes—2-3-4.

Dan Bulger Takes 'Sweep' Stakes

he gave the favorite after being bumped by Hypothesis and losing valuable ground at the start. Pegomas set the early pace, but wilted after six furlongs. Daytona and Laureat 2d then took up the running, keeping in front until Dan Bulger's magnificent response in the home stretch.

Lady Ralli's Finalist was up with the leaders during the early running, but the top weight of 127 pounds told on him as the field hit the "hill" leading to the finish line. He just narrowly missed getting into the money, finishing fourth. Then came Tempest 2d, Commander III, winner last year; Holyrood, Stone Ginger, Noble Turk and Towton Moor.

D. C. Guard Boxers Fight in Richmond

With Willie Feary and Steve Mamakos making their season's debuts, five District of Columbia National Guard boxers will go to Richmond to engage in a series of bouts at the city arena tonight. The soldiers plan an invasion of Norfolk, tomorrow night.

Feary, 1935 District lightweight champ, will fight in that weight, while Mamakos, runner-up in the welterweight contests of both of last season's tourneys, will move up to the 150-pound division, for the Richmond bouts. George Pickeral, having outgrown the bantamweight class, in which he won the District of Columbia title last March, will fight as a full fledged 126-pounder.

In his first gloved encounter, Julie Di Moglio will square off as the other 135-pounder, while Wes Beahm will fight as a welterweight.

New Threat in Georgetown's Backfield

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

So the Cardinals want to trade Dizzy Dean. At least that is what Mr. Branch Rickey, vice president of the St. Louis club, has announced to the public prints. But we have heard that one before. The Cardinals are always wanting to trade Dizzy Dean, they would have you believe.

POVICH.

But this year, Mr. Rickey is slightly ahead of schedule. He never announces that the Cards want to trade Dizzy until the team is in spring training and Dizzy is making threats to quit the Cardinals unless they meet his salary demands. Then it is that the Cards whip him into line by announcing that they will trade him to the Phillies or, mayhap, the Dodgers.

I don't know why Mr. Rickey is beating the gun this season unless it's because Dizzy has been talking and before he could be unquoted has said that the Cardinals are a very bad ball team, indeed. Throughout his barnstorming tour after the end of the season, Dizzy took great delight in announcing that the Cardinals were "a bunch of semipros" and that he was the only big leaguer on the team.

Back in St. Louis the people who own the team can hardly be expected to take kindly to Dizzy's remarks, but it's an overworked threat that they are pulling against Dizzy when they say they want to trade him. The Cardinals are about as eager to trade Dizzy as they are to give him half the club's stock.

And they know, too, that there is some truth in what Dizzy has been saying about the Cardinals. Without the older Dean, the Cards would have been a sorry team last season. There wasn't another pitcher on the club who was even a decent risk out there on the mound. Dizzy all but pitched 'em into the pennant, nevertheless.

Mr. Rickey does make the reservation that he will not trade Dean to the Giants or the Cubs. That would be tantamount to assuring either of those clubs the 1937 pennant, he knows. And he knows, too, that there isn't another club in the league who can afford to buy Dean, so it may be seen how eager the Cardinals are to rid themselves of the Great One.

Rickey's threat to trade Dean falls flatter, too, when you remember that the Cardinals have recently come into another fine pitcher, Lon Warneke, former star of the Cubs. With Dean and Warneke working side by side on the Cardinals' pitching staff, Mr. Rickey's team stands as a serious pennant threat in 1937.

If, with Dean as their only dependable pitcher, the Cardinals could tie for second in the 1936 race, then with the addition of Warneke they certainly figure to make a strenuous bid for the 1937 flag. Rickey was willing to trade off two regulars to obtain Warneke from the Cubs and with Warneke in the Cardinals' fold they would hardly be foolhardy enough to trade Dean and their pennant chances away.

Speaking of the Cubs reminds this department that Manager Charley Grimm, of the Chicago Cubs, has reason to rue that sportsmanlike gesture he made in midseason last summer when he persuaded the umpires to permit Dean to remain in a Cubs-Cardinals game after they had ordered him out following a fight on the field.

It was at Grimm's request that the umpire in chief allowed Dean to remain in the box and the Cardinals went on to beat the Cubs behind Dizzy's pitching. That one game meant the difference between second place and third place to both teams. They eventually tied for second and thus split the second and third teams' shares of the World Series spoils.

Grimm's generosity cost each Cub player approximately $300 in World Series spoils. Had Dean been banished from the game and the Cubs won, they would have received $1,200 each as their share of the series melon instead of the individual purses of $900 they drew as their share after tying for second place.

Giants Buy Hubbard From Green Bay Club

New York, Oct. 28 (AP).—The New York Giants, of the National Professional Football League, today obtained Cal Hubbard, 255-pound tackle and American League baseball umpire, from the Green Bay Packers.

Hubbard was a regular with the Packers last season, but his baseball duties kept him from reporting to Green Bay when the 1936 pro football season opened and he was on the inactive list.

Cards, Loyola Both to Rely On Passes

Both Teams Shown to Be Weak on Air Defense for Tilt Saturday.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New Orleans, La., Oct. 28.—Coach Eddie Reed, of Loyola, has indicated in practice sessions this week that he intends to meet the Catholic University's great running game with a potent passing attack when his Wolves tackle the Cardinals in their second battle in ten years Friday night.

A decision to rely upon the forward pass for the scores against the visitors was reached after scout reports on the Catholic U.-Mississppi game were scanned. These reports told how the Catholics had held Ray Hapes and company practically to a standstill on the ground, but fell for a number of passes that were turned into touchdowns. Reed and his assistant, "Dixie" Howell, feel that perhaps the locals can do the same thing.

Loyola's passing attack is a deceptive one. Eddie Daigle, regarded the fastest back in the South, does most of the chucking. Of course, his specialty is dashing around the ends, and whenever he starts off to the side the opposition naturally shifts for him. That's when they are fooled, for he usually wheels in his tracks and shoots a long aerial to Ray Staub or Buster Costanza, the ends. Pel Hughes, another halfback, also passes. So does Cecil Sanders, the quarterback. Mike Casey, a reserve player, is the best at this art among the Wolves.

The game is likely to develop into a battle of passes. Loyola is notoriously weak against aerials as has been brought out in numerous games this season, and it's a cinch that "Dutch" Bergman has heard about it. So the Cardinals are also expected to unlimber a barrage of passes in their effort to defeat Loyola, which put up a gallant fight against the powerful University of Alabama team last week, losing 13 to 6.

From his temporary headquarters at Hammond, north of here, Coach Bergman reports that his squad is in fine physical condition. The only complaint his players had to make was the heat of last Saturday was almost as big an opponent as Ole Miss. But with a continuance of the present cool spell, he doesn't believe his boys will suffer much this week from climatic conditions. They will arrive here early Thursday afternoon.

Kampfer Meets Olson on Mat Tonight

Hans (You Nazi Man) Kampfer, the Terrible Teuton, and Cliff (Cluck, Cluck) Olson, the Sweet Swede, two of the most bruising burpers in the wrestling game, will collide at Turner's Arena tonight.

The resultant impast is generally expected to provide a crash that will waft the steel-girdered roof from Senor Turner's garden of groans and bring flocks of fanatics to the site of action.

Olson is the human butter ball who bounces so beautifully when slapped to the mat. He has taken part in two thrillers in his last two appearances here. In thriller No. 1 he was defeated by Ernie Dusek. In thriller No. 2 he beat Ernie on a disqualification. Both bouts were so packed with action that it is very doubtful if he will be sidetracked by Kampfer, but probably will be saved for a third engagement with Ernie of the Duseks.

Abe Kashey, who was to have substituted for Scotty McDougal against Stan Sokolis in a 30-minute preliminary, pulled up with an infected finger yesterday and his place against Stan will be taken by Tex Morgan, a very rough-and-ready gentleman, indeed.

McDougal will work against Nick Campofreda, the up-and-coming young former Western Maryland athlete, in another 30-minute argument. Pat McKay will encounter Henri Piers in the remaining snarlfest scheduled to endure half an hour.

A 45-minute semifinal will bring together Rowdy Rudy Dusek, the oldest of the clan Dusek, against Matros Kirilenko, a favorite of former days, who is rapidly being reestablished on local mats.

Police Boys Practice.

An important practice for the Police Boys' varsity team is called for today at 7:30 p. m. All players are to report to No. 5 Precinct promptly at 7 p. m.

Hoyas Trample 'Shenandoah' In Proxy Tilt

Shenandoah College, as represented by Georgetown's freshmen, received a six-touchdown drubbing from the varsity in a spirited 40-minute scrimmage yesterday at the Hilltop, which should give you an idea of how seriously the Hoyas are taking this, the smallest game on their card.

Everybody saw service but the regulars who aren't going to play this week if Hagerty sticks to his original plans. "Peanuts" Sheeran and Vince Healy, the team's two scat backs, reeled off several long touchdown runs, Sheeran getting away on one 50-yard jaunt. They visibly impressed Hagerty and may get into Saturday's starting line-up.

But all of the stars were not behind the line, for Mike Fuardo, center, and Tom Robertson, tackle, stood out like a couple of all-Americans, smearing everything within shouting distance of their positions. Offensively, they ripped the freshman line to shreds, opening up holes large enough for any circus fat lady to squeeze through.

Hagerty's so-called second stringers are showing up better in practice than the regulars, and the coach figures he may see a repetition of last year's game with Western Maryland, in which a reserve team went out and rolled up a 10-to-0 lead on the Terrors, and the regulars came in and finally succeeded in losing the decision.

Maryland continued its program of easy work yesterday in completing preparations on its home field for Saturday's game with Florida. The squad is scheduled to leave this afternoon at 1:20 o'clock for Gainesville, arriving there tomorrow in plenty of time for a workout on the battlefield.

Bill Guckeyson's shoulder and Coleman Headley's knee are slowly responding to treatment, and neither is certain of appearing in the starting line-up, although both are sure to get into the game. Willis and Gormley are not in the best shape, either, but will be ready by game time.

With an eye to smoothing the wrinkles in offensive play which cropped up last week, Gallaudet's squad went through a long dummy scrimmage yesterday as work continued for Saturday's game with Wilson Teachers College.

The Blues were guilty of poor blocking against William and Mary, which, together with fumbles at inopportune moments, was responsible for their defeat. The boys didn't look good in practice yesterday, but Coach Orrel Mitchell feels that they will be back in stride before game time.

The Washington Chapter of Catholic University Alumni will sponsor a play by play account of the Cardinals' game with Loyola Friday night in the Music Building auditorium, starting at 8 o'clock. All friends of the university are invited to attend.

The account of the game will be heard following an alumni meeting at which plans for Homecoming Day, which will find North Carolina State pitted against the Cards in the football attraction, will be discussed.

'Pot Games' Paved Way For May's Pin Career

By Bill McCormick.

Every so often a new local bowling star pops up—apparently from nowhere—zooms high, and proceeds to burn brightly for many years.

"My goodness," or words to that effect, exclaims J. Duckpin Dub, who has been striving for many years to beat the dummy, "My goodness, here's a young upstart who probably hasn't been rolling duckpins for more than a few months and he is averaging better than 120. I've been trying for lo, these many years—and look at my average."

What J. Duckpin Dub doesn't realize is that the new star has been through many a gruelling game before he ever attempted to roll in the big time, as witness the case of Henry May, the youngster who is burning up the District League this season.

Learned in Pot Games.

Henry May is only 25 years old and he was an absolute unknown—so far as newspaper publicity is concerned—until this year, but that doesn't mean he hasn't been working hard at the business of upsetting maples for at least four years.

Henry got his form and experience the hard way—in pot games. Pot games are those bitterly contested affairs in which each participant drops a buck, or two bucks or five bucks in the pot, depending on the wealth of the players, and the winner takes the whole business.

Pot games are very serious affairs, but they do not provide really big-time, nerve-wracking competition. Henry fiddled about in pot games for a few years, and finally came under the eye of Paulie Harrison, himself one of the best duckpinners ever produced in the District and a bowling teacher of no small merit.

The first thing Paul did was to teach May not to try to rip the alley apart with each ball he tossed. When Harrison first started teaching him, Henry's ball, for speed, was likened to that of Joe Freschi, one of the fastest bowlers Washington ever knew.

In Third Place.

"Now I take my time," May confesses. "I don't care how long it takes the ball to get to the pins, nor how hard it hits them—as long as I have control."

This year May started competing in the District League, with the Rose Liquor team. At the very outset of the season he jumped into an imposing lead, but in the last few weeks, largely because he is still trying to slow down his ball, he has dropped back to third place, with an average of 125.14.

Local observers of the game believe Henry is no flash in the pan, but that he is destined to become gradually better and better, until he finally takes his place alongside the Astor Clarkes, Maxie Rosenbergs, Reds Megaws, Joe Harrisons, Paul Harrisons and other stars of the alley.

If you should care to watch Henry in action some time, he usually can be found at either the Recreation or Lucky Strike alleys. And when you watch him, remember that he didn't just pop up in big league bowling all of a sudden, but climbed up the hard way.

Pilot to Fight Man Who Beat His Protege

Those who wish to see the impossible can do so at Turner's Arena next Monday night when Billy Edwards, formerly manager of Killer Lamar, makes passes at one Shorty Lamar, another colored gentleman, in a six-round preliminary to the Bob Olin-Buck Everett encounter.

The whole business started when Mistah Lamar, who had been touted as a second Joe Louis, a new dark menace, and inky eradicator, was stopped by this same Shorty Ahearn with whom Edwards will joust.

Edwards was just a bit disgusted with Lamar following that knockout, in which Lamar gave evidence of not possessing an over supply of moxie, as the boys are wont to describe courage. Just to make sure, Edwards again matched his fighter with Ahearn—and the short one again stowed Lamar away.

"Effen Ah ca do that, Ah reckon Ah can still fight," reasoned Edwards, who once was a pretty good fighter. So he started to whip himself into shape, finally achieved good condition and hied himself to Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, demanding a chance.

"Mistuh Ahearn," he informed Mons. I Lose Money. "Ah wants to fight anybuddy yo'all seelect fo' me, but Ah want to name jest one opponent. Ah wants to sja't off wid Shorty Ahearn."

Mons. Ahearn granted the request, and thus it is that the public will witness the sight of a manager fighting the man who punched holes in his meal ticket.

Miss Ellis Sets Bowling Mark With 419

Evelyn Ellis picked off 419 pins in her three games with Rosslyn's Ladies District League team last night to smash a set mark that weathered two years of competition, leading her mates to a 3-0 victory over Georgetown. The old record of 411 was made by Lorraine Gulli in 1933. Miss Ellis' games were 141, 128 and 150. Rosslyn's best game was 552 and its total 1,633.

Esther Burton's 132 game and 328 total were high as Arcade turned back National Beer, 2-1.

The Ladies District League match at Lucky Strike resulted in the home team's 2-1 victory over Swanee. Polly Shugrue's 135 game and Lorraine Gulli's 346 set were high.

Kennedy, and his Tornado teammates, made off with all the spoils in the Dynamite League at Arcadia. Kennedy's 151 and 372 accounted for the individual laurels, while the team took the honors in its division with a 509 game and 1,469 set.

R. Sha, of Connecticut, hung up a pair of season records in the Optical League at Arcadia with his game score of 161 and set of 398. His team rolled 540 for high game, but set prize went to Hilbert's with 1,557.

Petworth and Brotman's shot an even 587 and tied for high game in the Petworth League, but the first-mentioned bagged set money by a comfortable margin with its 1,690. Ruche, of Brotman's, massaged the maples for a 153 game, while high set went to Fillius, of York Service, with 389.

American Security & Trust No. 1 spilled enough wood for two new season's marks in the Bankers League at Arcadia, rolling 634 and 1,782. Bill Mehler, of City Bank, was credited with 156 for high game, and a teammate, Jim Hayden, rolled the best set, 381.

Radiophoto: Dan Bulger Decides Irish Sweepstakes in Cambridgeshire

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Dan Bulger (No. 11), is shown in this picture, relayed by radiophoto and wirephoto, winning the ninety-seventh running of the Cambridgeshire Stakes in Newmarket, England, yesterday. This race brought thousands of dollars to fortunate holders of Irish Sweepstakes tickets. Daytona (No. 15) was second and Laureate II (between Dan Bulger and Daytona) finished third.

Will "Life Begin at 40" for You?

Will you be able to tackle your biggest job between 40 and 50—and see it through? Your best guarantee of vigor in the "Middle Years" is "moderation" now. Train for the future by more sensible eating, drinking and exercise. If you would drink pleasantly and sensibly, choose a whiskey that AGREES with you.

Every man who enjoys whiskey wants fine, rich taste. But when Seagram announced that thorough research had proved Seagram's Crowns "a most wholesome form of whiskey", moderate men for the first time found that there was an important basis for choosing whiskey in addition to "finer taste". That basis is kindness. Your whiskey must agree with you.

From the exhaustive research instituted by the House of Seagram and conducted by an eminent group of impartial investigators, you now know that the "crown for kindness" rightfully belongs to Seagram's Crown Whiskies—because of the special Seagram method of blending them.

When you choose Seagram's Crowns at the bar, or when you serve them at home, you will find them kind, gentle and considerate. You are sure of getting finer taste, and your guests will compliment your good judgment. Won't you try them?

Steel Orders Await Result Of Elections

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 28.—A lull in new steel business, particularly in the heavy products, has brought down the Pittsburgh operating rate to 70 per cent, a drop of two points, but the average for the country as a whole is substantially unchanged at 74 per cent because of increases elsewhere, Iron Age said today in the weekly review of the industry.

"The Pittsburgh district, where capacity in the heavy products predominates," the Trade Journal says, "is chiefly affected by an inclination to mark time until after election in building construction projects, which also face seasonal curtailment with the approach of winter. Other districts have been aided by the release of deferred specifications by some automobile companies.

"While for the first time in many weeks indications do not all point in the direction of a continued upward movement in steel production, the present easier situation has not changed the opinion of the industry that conditions are highly favorable for an operating rate varying from 70 to 75 per cent during the remainder of the year. * * * This view is predicated on the assumption that higher steel prices will prevail in the first quarter and will be anticipated by a fresh buying movement. * * *

A further decline of 25 cents a ton in heavy melting steel scrap at Pittsburgh brought the Iron Age scrap composite down to $16.50 from the year's peak of $16.75 in the third week of September.

Wheat Drops After Advance

Chicago, Oct. 28 (AP).—Wheat prices marched up the hill today, but then marched down again, covering a range of about a cent a bushel. The chief new stimulus for wheat to go higher was a report that hot winds had done damage to crops in Australia. Selling to realize profits on advances was largely the reason for reactions. Dealings lacked volume.

Chicago wheat futures closed easy, unchanged to ⅝ lower compared with yesterday's finish, December 115⅝@115½, May 114@114⅛, July 99⅞@1.00; corn unchanged to ½ off, December 95¼, May 90@90⅛, July 86½@86⅝; oats unchanged to ⅛ down, December 41⅛, and rye varying from ¼ decline to ½ advance, December 83⅜. Industrial Net 52.8 Per Cent Over Year Ago

Heavy Industry Leads in Reports From 134 Corporations.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 28.—Industrial income continued its rising trend in the third quarter, statements issued by the first 134 reporting companies showing a 52.8 per cent gain over the same quarter a year ago. Total net income indicated for this group was $135,375,593 for the quarter against $88,551,873 last year.

Heavy industry—dealing principally with other manufacturers—maintained its place at the head of the procession. The five biggest gainers, with one exception, fell in the producers' goods class.

Largest profit advances were in the machine tool, heavy machinery, railroad equipment, building supplies, farm implement, oil and steel groups where the insistent demands of soaring industrial activity made themselves felt. Industry moved up 31 per cent in the 12 months, the Associated Press Index shows.

Other industries benefitting from the upturn include automobile accessories, installment financing and business machines. Slight declines were shown by a few utility holding and liquor companies.

The nine months total showed approximately the same rate of gain shown in the third quarter, 51.2 per cent. The $338,958,559 total compared with $224,224,383 in the same period of 1935.

Great Textile Mill Finally Dissolved

Three stockholders, holding proxies representing 66.79 per cent of the total shares, voted dissolution at a five-minute meeting.

C., B. & Q. Plans to Buy $8,000,000 Equipment

New York, Oct. 28 (AP).—The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad is contemplating purchase of about $8,000,000 of new freight equipment, Ralph Budd, president, said following a board of directors' meeting today.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Edge Into Higher Ground in More Active Trading Under Spur of Larger Dividends.

New York, Oct. 28.—Stocks held their firm tone and in moderately active trading gained small amounts in price on most fronts. Here and there the market proved to be as thin on the offering side as it was day before yesterday on the buying side and prices jumped with much agility. The average rise among favorite industrial stocks was around a point toward the close. Sales volume was around 1,750,000 shares. Bonds were firm. Foreign currencies had little life. December wheat lost its half-cent gain of yesterday and closed at 115½ cents a bushel.

Nearly all classes of stocks moved further forward from the start and held fairly well against last-hour profit taking. The first hour brought more than the usual sales volume—about half a million shares. Steel issues were helped by the United States Steel and other steel company reports, and motor shares revived. Steel preferred shot up to a new high level. Steel common hardened a little. Bethlehem was buoyant, as were Youngstown and Republic.

Two popular groups with the speculators were the mail orders and the amusements. Montgomery Ward reached a new high price. Some of the other store shares found a good reception as the holiday buying opens up and as the implications of the lavish dividend distributions sink in. This autumn also is proving to be a good one for motion-picture theater operators, and the shares of those companies continue to harden. Paramount and Warners were favorites.

Concentrated Trading.

Oil shares found fresh interest. Standard returned to its recent high-price level. Texas reached a new peak on a rise of nearly 2 points. Chemicals advanced for an average of 2 points. Allied climbed 5 points. Fractional gains were the rule among railroad stocks, and the utilities were firm.

Demand for the metals, rail equipments and specialties brought many additions of 2 points or so to prices. About 15 stocks accounted for a quarter of total dealings. In the list were Elfingon Schild, Kelvinator, Paramount, American Rolling Mills, Warner, Texas, General Motors, Steel and Montgomery Ward. The turnover in Eltingon was about as great as the entire volume for last year.

Other buoyant industrial stocks were Case, Peoples Drug and Rubberoid, which began with a 5-point advance on top of a dozen points yesterday. Among the preferred stocks which rose sharply were Endicott Johnson, Fuller, Gulf Mobile, International Paper, Jones & Laughlin (on dividend resumption), Paramount and Minneapolis Honeywell. Some of the tobaccos and foods were unsteady.

Trade developments of the day hadn't enough in them that was new to give stocks any particular fillip. The good earnings reported for third quarter by the United States Steel Corporation—the best for any quarter in half a dozen years—and the larger payment on account of dividend arrears for the preferred stock were pleasing, but were quite generally anticipated. It is also appreciated that the Steel Corporation, along with many others, will pay further dividends before the year end, that the operating rate is comparatively high, and that, partially because of the returning prosperity and partly because of the rapidly advancing living costs, wages also will be increased.

Hothouse Dividends.

It is becoming monotonously repetitious to say that the rising tide of dividend payments now being made is largely the effect of the vicious undistributed profits-tax law; and it is equally wearisome to say that nevertheless the money would not have to be paid out if it had not been earned. Just the same, many people lose sight of the connection and seem to think that prosperity has returned in the same proportion as dividends and wages have gone up. Both dividends and wages are being forced in the hothouse of New Deal policies and laws, the process made possible because of the natural recovery from the trade depression.

Few dividend recipients are going to shiver over long-term prospects. They will prefer to let President Sloan of General Motors and other business leaders worry over the fundamental unsoundness of much of our economic program. Wage earners also are going to assume that their earnings will keep up with living costs (although that rarely has turned out to be the case), and let the economists wonder if the resulting cost increases will reduce consumption. In other words, on the surface, more prosperity in the next several weeks is likely to be seen.

Foreign Trade.

Faced with the alternative of letting go over until after election any favorbale publicity for the September foreign trade returns unless an extra clerical effort were made to publish the figures this week, the Department of Commerce improved on its record of a month ago. Trade reports for September were given to the press this afternoon, thus making October a month of two reports, that for August having been released earlier this month. As generally predicted a fortnight ago, when the cotton trade statistics were disclosed, showing a sharp gain in exports of the staple, our outward shipments last month rose sharply. Imports also increased, but not so much as exports, and consequently on their face the figures show for the department an apparent excess of exports of about $4,000,000.

Import Excess.

Actually the country continued to run an unfavorable trade balance in September. Exports totaled $219,967,600, a good seasonal rise over August and a mild increase (about 10 per cent) over a year ago, but with silver net imports of $8,100,000 our total imports were $223,600,000, leaving an import excess of $3,600,000. Even without silver we now have an excess of imports for the nine months of $33,000,000, against an export excess twice that large a year ago. With silver, our nine months unfavorable trade balance is $180,000,000. We have nevertheless increased in that period our gold stock by nearly $800,000,000.

Old Home Week.

The lunch hour crowd in Wall Street was treated to the rare spectacle of a parade led by the President of the United States. As usual some ticker tape was thrown from the windows and here and there a flag was flown, although none could be noticed flying from the stock exchange—possibly because of the scaffolding hiding the flagpole. In revisiting old familiar scenes in the Wall Street sector, President Roosevelt had to ride under the huge Landon banner floating across lower Broadway, but otherwise the district of the money changers looked much as it did in the years when he was taking so active a part in it himself.

Anniversary.

A year ago this week the banks, tired of lending money on call and on time at the record low rate of a quarter of 1 per cent, marked the rate for call funds to three-quarters of 1 per cent and the price of time money to 1 per cent. Because of the unattractiveness of the old rates and fears of their re-establishment there was no further offering of funds below the rate fixed by a majority of the big banks. The artificially maintained higher rates lasted until May of this year, when call money was marked up to 1 per cent and time rates to 1¼ per cent. These rates still hold and the arrangement has been highly satisfactory to the banks, which have added some $7,000,000 to their earnings from such loans and at the same time have seen them increase in volume by about $160,000,000.

Mines, Industrials In Demand on Curb

New York, Oct. 28 (AP).—Industrial and mining shares supplied some forward motion in the curb market today, while utilities and other group leaders stood still or declined a little.

4 Big Packers Give Workers 7% Wage Rise

Increase Is Expected to Affect 100,000 Employes.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 28.—Wage increases granted thousands of plant employes of the big meat packing concerns were expected today to affect ultimately 100,000 workers in the industry.

The four big Chicago packing concerns, Swift, Armour, Cudahy and Wilson announced a 7 per cent increase in plant workers' pay, effective Monday, the first day of the industry's new fiscal year. The increases will lift wage scales to a level almost 20 per cent above the 1929 peak and nearly 50 per cent above the 1932 low, the industry reported.

As a result of the action of these four companies, it was estimated that ultimately 80,000 employes would benefit to the extent of nearly $8,000,000 annually. Office employes were not included.

In addition, it was pointed out, smaller packers, whose organizations were made up of union employes, might follow the example set by the "big four." Some already have, but spokesmen for smaller Chicago packers said no definite decision had yet been made on proposed wage increases. In the past, however, wage actions by the large companies have been followed by similar action on the part of small packers.

THAT SHOWS YOU DON'T KNOW WOMEN, DENNIE. THEY MAKES CLAIMS WHETHER THEY GOT 'EM OR NOT.
YOU BOUGHT THE PLACE YOURSELF, HOW'S SHE GOT ANY CLAIMS?
I WON'T GET MUCH FER THE PLACE, EITHER. BESSIE'S BROKE ALL THE DISHES, THROWIN' 'EM AT ME, AN' THAT SCARRED THE WALLS. IT LOOKS LIKE A BATTLEFIELD.
HERE, BILL, GO SEE THIS MAN RIGHT NOW. HE'S INTERESTED IN YOUR CAFE!
WHAT'S THE RUSH, MARY, IF HE'D BUY IT TO-DAY HE'D BUY IT TO-MORROW. GOSH.

Last Three Days
HECHT MONTH

And as a Fitting Climax to This Great Store-Wide Event We're Going to

LET THE VALUES TALK

¶ Even if you don't read advertisements, it's ten-to-one you'll read this one—because we're going to omit all the fancy phrases, all the old well-worn superlatives, and confine ourselves to plain, hard facts. For the past 28 days Hecht Month has set the value pace in Washington — and everybody knows it. It is superfluous for us to go into a long song-and-dance about our success. The evidence is before your eyes. The savings are in your pockets. The values are here to tell their own story. We only wish to remind you forcefully that there are but three more days left of this store-wide event. It's going to be a whirlwind finish. We've put all our power into preparing for these last three days. Assortments are complete. On every floor and in every department of the Hecht Co. it is to your advantage to buy for yourself and your family—NOW! The values are talking! It will pay you, and pay you well to listen.
